Lewis Charge Of a 'Hidden' Fund Denied By Tydings

New Dealer Says Senate Campaign Inquirers Should Investigate.

Sheppard Report Due This Morning

Facts About Maryland's Race Will Be Made Known Today.

The Maryland Race.

The President's "invasion" of Maryland was attacked and defended by Representative Lewis and Senator Tydings, the rival candidates.—Page 2.

'Hidden Fund' Charged.

Senator Tydings labelled "ridiculous, absurd, and unfounded in fact" last night charges of Representative Lewis that he had a secret campaign fund of $200,000 and that Morris Schapiro, industrialist, had contributed $5,000 to his campaign.

"I'll give Dave Lewis half of the fund if he can find it," said Tydings in Baltimore. "In fact, I'll do better than that; I'll give him three-fourths of it."

The Senator said that his campaign was now $12,000 in the red and had only $6,000 in sight.

He denied emphatically that Schapiro had contributed "a single cent" to his campaign, adding, however, that it would have been no crime if he had.

Earlier Representative Lewis asked the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee to investigate information that $200,000 in "hidden" funds was being spent to renominate Tydings.

"Pay to Voters."

He charged "concealed gifts" to the Tydings campaign were in excess of amounts reported by the Senator, as Chairman Sheppard called a meeting of his Senate committee to hear a preliminary report from investigators on the Maryland contest.

Tydings Tuesday told the Sheppard committee that $37,024 had been contributed and $35,957 spent in his own campaign.

"Reliable information reaching my active friends indicates the campaign expenditures of Senator Tydings have been far in excess of those reported to your committee," Lewis wrote Sheppard last night. "They report to me that some of Tydings' workers privately place these expenditures at as much as $200,000.

"Many of these, of course, are hidden, or side expenditures by committees or private individuals which should nonetheless be listed in accordance with the corrupt practices act."

Report Due Today.

The Lewis letter followed a flurry of charges and counter charges filed with the committee by Tydings and his New Deal opponent. Tydings recently wrote the committee that Federal officials have been "notoriously" active for Lewis. Lewis had countered that WPA job assignments have been used against his own candidacy, and had previously asked the committee to look into Tydings' contributions.

Sheppard said all of the allegations will be laid before the committee this morning, when investigators will make their initial report on the Maryland primaries.

Representative Lewis in his complaint to the committee inclosed a copy of an invitation he said was

JAMES ROOSEVELT.

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

First Lady Says She Is Present to See Son 'Told Us All the Truth About What the Doctors Had to Say' Before He Goes Under Knife.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Rochester, Minn., Sept. 7.—James Roosevelt, eldest son and secretary of the President, entered St. Mary's Hospital here tonight to prepare for an operation, while his mother stood by to see that he "told us all the truth" about his condition.

"The family seemed to feel that while he would probably be here for only a day, it would be a good idea for someone to go with him to make sure that he told us all the truth about what the doctors had to say," Mrs. Roosevelt explained in her copyrighted newspaper column, "My Day."

Roosevelt has been under treatment at the Mayo clinic for stomach ulcers. Mrs. Roosevelt arrived with him by plane Tuesday and tonight canceled plans to leave for her home at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Roosevelt's physician said "a clinical examination completed today showed that results of previous medical treatment were rather disappointing and Mr. Roosevelt will enter the hospital for preoperative preparation."

The operation probably will be performed the first of next week, the doctor said.

Neighbor Saw Brooke Leave Death Scene

Tells Court She Witnessed Major Speed From House Where Wife Was Slain.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ga., Sept. 7.—A neighbor of Maj. John R. Brooke, Army instructor accused of killing his wife, testified today she saw the officer drive "hurriedly away from his home" before the children found the battered body of the wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Brooke. Mrs. Samuel A. Gibson, the witness, then lived in quarters next door to the Brookes at Fort Benning.

She was followed to the stand by an Army surgeon, Lieut. Col. O. LA Graham. He said he and another surgeon, Lieut. Col. Martin R. Reiber, examined the body and were of the opinion Mrs. Brooke had died about 10 a. m. Asked if he believed Mrs. Brooke could have been killed in a fall downstairs from the second floor, he answered, "No."

Mrs. Gibson said it was about 11:45 when she saw the 45-year-old major hurry from his quarters, dressed in slacks wet to the knees, and a blue shirt. He carried a package. Mrs. Brooke's battered body was found by the Brooke children about 12:15 on their return home from play.

Col. Graham testified Mrs. Brooke's body lay on the floor at the foot of the stairs, in a diagonal position. The head was lying in a pool of coagulated blood. The skull was fractured.

The colonel said he and Col. Reiber examined the upper floor of the house as well as the downstairs and kitchen and that he found the house orderly, with the exception of a "scatter rug which was humped up a short distance to the right of the body," the State claims Brooke's motive was to collect his wife's insurance.

Film Magnate Bribed Union, NLRB Is Told

Schenck Gave $100,000 to Block Organizing, Complaint Says.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 7.—Charges were made before the National Labor Relations Board today by Jeff Kibre, chairman of a film technicians' committee, that Joseph M. Schenck, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., paid a $100,000 bribe to a union official to prevent 12,000 movie employes from organizing for collective bargaining under the Wagner act.

The complaint, filed with Dr. Towne Nylander, regional director of the labor board, alleged Schenck, as president of the producers' association, paid the $100,000 to William Bioff, studio labor union official. Bioff, since January 2, 1936, and until his recent resignation, was personal representative of President George Browne, of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes.

Kibre charged that under the alleged deal with Bioff the I.A.T.S.E. grew from 115 persons to its present membership of 12,000 through the January 2, 1936, closed shop agreement whereby workers were forced to join in order to gain employment or remain employed.

He alleged the producers simulated a process of collective bargaining in an effort to satisfy the legal requirements of the Wagner labor act, but because they had been dealing with the paid agent of the producers these producers had, in effect, refused to deal with their employes.

At executive offices of Twentieth Century-Fox Studios, secretaries reported Schenck was in New York on business and could not be reached for a statement.

Aides to Will Hays, head of the Producers Association, said he was

Proof Bacon Was Shakespeare Sought in Old Va. Churchyard

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., Sept. 7.—Mrs. Marie Bauer, of Glendale, Calif., a subscriber to the belief that "Bacon was Shakespeare," believes she has struck pay dirt in her hunt for a manuscript treasure.

She believes gold chalices and old manuscripts, including "lost Shakespearean originals" which some people are convinced were written by Sir Francis Bacon and colleagues, were buried in December, 1674, in a Williamsburg vault. The vault, she says, is in the churchyard of Bruton Parish Episcopal Church, a colonial house of worship erected in 1710-15.

Discovery of these manuscripts, Mrs. Bauer contends, will provide "conclusive and undeniable evidence" that Francis Bacon's clique imbedded in their writings a "Masonic code" which when decoded will reveal "enough historical facts to warrant the rewriting of the whole history of the period (prior to 1635)" and possibly clinch the Baconian fans' argument that the great philosopher actually wrote most of those works ascribed to Shakespeare.

Dewey Given Setback at Hines Trial

Schultz Auditor Denies Story Davis' Sister Told About Check.

Troy Politician Testifies Defendant Sought Aid for Mobster.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 7.—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey rested the people's case against James J. Hines in Supreme Court late today.

By request of Lloyd Paul Stryker, chief counsel for the defense of Hines on charges of having conspired to protect the Dutch Schultz policy racket, Justice Ferdinand Pecora adjourned court until 2 p. m. tomorrow, when Stryker will move for dismissal of all counts.

The argument of this motion, Stryker announced, would be more than a mere formality, and may be expected to take up all of tomorrow afternoon.

Two swift hard blows were struck by Dewey in the closing half-hour of today's hearing. Cornelius Casey, of Troy, N. Y., Democratic Party leader of Rensselaer County, testified that Hines used a political friendship of many years' standing in 1934 in asking him to help keep the police in his political area from "pushing Dutch Schultz around."

Lawyer Testifies.

Schultz was then in his neighborhood, fighting a Federal charge of violating the income tax laws.

James D. C. Murray, noted New York criminal lawyer, as final witness for the people, testified to a conversation with Hines and J. Richard "Dixie" Davis, counsel for the Schultz mob in 1935, when Dewey's appointment as special prosecutor was being bruited, as a result of the inquiries of the "runaway grand jury."

He went with "Dixie," Hope Dare, Dixie's mistress, and George Weinberg, Schultz gangster, to a Long Island golf course, Murray said, and there "Dixie" warned Hines of Dewey's possible appointment. He said he himself informed Hines that Dewey was a "rough, tough, and relentless prosecutor," who would not hesitate to press an indictment against anybody. "Dixie," the witness said, told Hines that something would have to be done in the matter or "a lot of us" will go to jail.

Hines, according to Murray, said, "We'll see about it."

Fifty Called by State.

As the people's case closed, 50 witnesses had testified for the prosecution, and more than 4,000 pages of testimony had been taken. Stryker said tonight that if his motions for a dismissal were denied, the presentation of the case for the defense would take at least two weeks. He said it was not yet determined whether Hines would take the stand.

Dewey's day was a stormy one. In the afternoon Milton Bernard, who made up income-tax returns for the Schultz gang, denied pre-

Cummings Drops Inquiry on Hague; Mayor Is Cleared

By the Associated Press.

Justice Department officials said yesterday they had found no evidence that Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City had violated the Federal civil rights statute prohibiting conspiracies to deprive any citizen of constitutional rights.

Accordingly, they said, they had dropped the investigation ordered last May by Attorney General Cummings after Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, was "deported" by Jersey City police when he tried to address a May Day mass meeting. Cummings shortly afterward advised the Socialist leader there apparently had been no violation of any Federal law.

Hitler Seeks British Backing As Press in London Suggests Czechs Give Him Sudetens

Fuehrer Turns to Direct Dealing With England in Exasperation.

'Dilatory Tactics' Of Prague Irk Him

He Orders Minority to Break Off Relations With Neighbors.

By the Associated Press.

Nuremberg, Germany, Sept. 7.—Chancellor Hitler turned tonight to direct negotiations with Great Britain in an endeavor to avert a European catastrophe over the Czechoslovak minority crisis.

The Fuehrer made the move in exasperation over what he charges is dilatory tactics on the part of the Czechoslovak government in its negotiations with the Sudeten German minority and over the government's failure to prevent further incidents in the German border regions.

At the same time he sent Konrad Henlein, leader of the Sudeten Germans, back to Czechoslovakia for a personal investigation of today's incident at Maehrisch-Ostrau, over which Sudeten German-Czechoslovak negotiations were broken off today.

Henlein, who had just arrived at the Nazi Party Congress here yesterday, was ordered to return in a few days. He did not give up his hotel room.

Pending Henlein's report to Hitler on the border incident, the minority negotiations in Czechoslovakia will be suspended.

Seeks More Concessions.

On the other hand, Hitler now will deal more intensively with Britain in an effort to convince her that the Czechoslovak government is not the master of the situation in its own state. Hitler contends the Sudeten Germans cannot be expected to owe loyalty to such a state.

News of the Maehrisch-Ostrau incident reached Henlein as he lay in bed with an attack of grippe. He arose immediately and got in touch with Hitler.

The Fuehrer, according to informed sources, was so enraged at the news that he ordered the Sudeten Germans to break off all negotiations with the Czechoslovak government.

The thunderbolt from Czechoslovakia came shortly after a high government spokesman had reported Hitler in effect previously had told Henlein concerning Prague's latest offer of concessions:

"Don't accept—ask for more and you'll get it."

In dealing directly with Britain now, Hitler's aim would be to get

Western Bandits Get $38,000 From Mail Stage Coach

Taylor, Ariz., Sept. 7 (U.P.).—Arizona peace officers and postal authorities led an old-fashioned Western manhunt tonight through the White Mountains for two highwaymen who held up the Fort Apache mail stage and escaped with pay roll sacks containing an estimated $38,000.

The bandits, with stocking masks over their faces, flashed pistols as they drove an old model automobile across the Bull Hollow Canyon road in the path of the stage carrying $21,000 consigned to the Southwest Lumber Mills and the Lee Mercantile Co., at McNary, and about $17,000 to the Fort Apache Indian Reservation.

Rumors of Recall Denied by Saito

His Excellency, Hirosi Saito, the Japanese Ambassador, denied last night that he had been recalled by his government.

Saito's statement followed a report issued by the Japanese-American News under a Tokyo date line stating that the Ambassador had been recalled in a major shakeup of the Japanese diplomatic service.

"I have heard nothing of any such change," Saito, vacationing at White Sulphur Springs, Va., told The Post.

The dispatch named as successor to Saito Kensuke Korinouchi, now vice minister of the foreign office and former consul general in New York City, and counselor of the Japanese embassy here in 1927. It stated that Saito would return to Tokyo to assume "a high place."

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Note—In a special cable from Paris, Walter Lippmann, noted commentator, deftly analyzes the complex problems that confront war-threatened Europe today. Mr. Lippmann has been studying the European scene first-hand for weeks.—Editor.

Estimate Of The European Situation.

PARIS, Sept. 7.—During the past fortnight, that is to say, in the period since Sir John Simon's speech, the peace of Europe has been hanging in the balance.

It still hangs in the balance.

But it is now clear enough that the crucial question is whether the British government, which is responsible to Parliament and to the Dominions, can make effective and convincing diplomatic contact with Hitler, who is responsible only to his own conscience.

LIPPMANN.

The key to the situation lies in the fact that Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Halifax are the ministers of a constitutional state, and are unable, therefore, until they have a mandate from Parliament and the Dominions, to say explicitly that Britain will go to war if Germany attacks Czechoslovakia. And because they are unable to be explicit, there is the great danger that Hitler will be persuaded by Herr Ribbentrop and the Radical Nazis that it is safe to attack.

* * * *

THIS BEING the basic fact, British diplomacy has been moving along two lines, the one through Berlin and the other through Prague.

In Berlin the British have been working to convince the rulers of Germany that if Czechoslovakia is attacked, and if it resists, France will in fact go to war and that Britain will in fact, though it has no explicit engagement, go to war too.

And, in Prague the British through Lord Runciman have been pressing the Czechs to make concessions so drastic that they will convince the British public and the outer world, and possibly Hitler himself, that the Czechs have made every possible sacrifice to avoid war.

They have asked the Czechs for concessions which Hitler can accept if what he wants is justice for the Sudetens and peace for Europe; they have asked for concessions which, if Hitler rejects them, will make him the indubitable aggressor in the event of war.

We are now at a point where it can be said that the British have been successful in Prague but that they have not been successful in Berlin. They have won half the battle for peace, the easier half, to be sure, but everything depends upon their winning the other half.

* * * *

THEY HAVE persuaded the Czechs to grant great concessions. Whether these concessions will satisfy yHitler, even temporarily, is as yet unknown. But it is known that these concessions satisfy the British government that the Czechs are acting in good faith.

There seems to be no real doubt that President Benes has convinced Lord Runciman, and through him the British govern-

Sudetens Cancel Peace Talks When Nazi Deputy Is Lashed

Special Cable to The Post.

Prague, Sept. 7.—An incident in which a Sudeten German member of the Czechoslovak Parliament was said to have been struck in the face by a policeman's riding crop hopelessly confused the situation in Czechoslovakia today.

The Nazi Sudeten German Party seized upon the incident as an excuse to proclaim that it was useless to negotiate on any basis with a government which permitted such things. It was announced that although it had decided to negotiate, it first would have to see the responsible authorities punished and measures taken to prevent repetition of the incident.

President Benes and Premier Hodza, already wondering whether they had not agreed to offer too many concessions to the Nazis, were trying to figure out tonight what it was all about. They found themselves in the difficult position of trying to stamp out a strong feeling throughout the country that they were offering too much to the Germanic minority, and at the same time trying to persuade the Nazis to forget an incident and accept their offer as a basis for negotia-

Government Repudiates 'Secession' Plan of Newspaper.

Laborites Demand Parliament's Call

Frontier Revision Idea Believed Considered in the Cabinet.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Sept. 7.—The British government had a busy time today trying to repair the damage done by a diplomatic bombshell which The Times of London, usually regarded as reflecting the government's views, tossed into the central European crisis this morning by suggesting editorially that the Czechoslovakian government might do well to consider handing its troublesome Sudeten German minority over to Fuehrer Hitler.

[Meanwhile, from Blackpool, the United Press reported that officials of the trades union congress and the Labor Party, in a joint statement, tonight denounced Germany's Czech policy and demanded that Parliament be summoned immediately because "the whole world stands today on the brink of war."—Editor's note.]

The Times editorial caused a sensation in London because of the prestige and authority of the paper in which it appeared, and because the editor, Geoffrey Dawson, is known to be on friendly terms with Prime Minister Chamberlain and most of the Cabinet. Dawson also has been linked with the influential Germanophile set, of which Lady Astor is a member.

Foreign Office Repudiates Idea.

After reading the editorial, diplomatic quarters drew the conclusion that the British had decided to abandon the Czechs to their fate and allow dismemberment of the country.

The foreign office immediately denied that the editorial had been inspired "even indirectly" from its side of Downing street, but not until this evening was an official communique issued to cover "Number 10," the Prime Minister's residence on the other side of the street.

"The suggestion to the effect that the Czechoslovak government might consider as an alternative to their present proposals the secession of a fringe of alien population in their territory, in no way represents the views of His Majesty's government."

Czechs Indignant.

Hours before the communique, however, the editorial had been flashed all over the world. It was reproduced in German newspapers and broadcast in German news bulletins. The French embassy here had cabled it to Paris early this morning. Tonight French Ambassador Corbin had a special interview with Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, at which he sought an explanation. Halifax himself conferred with Dawson during the day.

Czech quarters in London were indignant and deplored the fact that the editorial appeared while the government in Prague was still attempting to negotiate with the Sudeten minority. It was pointed out that the editorial, despite the government's denial of responsibility, would stiffen Hitler's attitude, and if the editorial truthfully reflected Whitehall's policy, it was said there would be only one reac-

Tydings Twice Hits Roosevelt Md. Invasion

Confident Senator Assails Not 'Man but Methods' in Baltimore.

Displaying a new vigor and confidence, Senator Millard E. Tydings publicly criticized President Roosevelt for interference in the Maryland senatorial campaign at two large party rallies in the Baltimore area last night.

In a radio address from Annapolis Lewis announced Housing Administration allocations to Annapolis and Baltimore totaling $5,453,000 and paused for applause to subside.

"How is it," he asked, "that you applaud invasion like that?"

Making his nearest approach to an answer to the President's Denton address, Senator Tydings urged the voters to turn out en masse "to show the country that the Free State of Maryland is still free."

First before 1,000 persons at Towson, county seat of Baltimore County, and then at a club meeting in Baltimore, he criticized Roosevelt for his role in the senatorial campaign.

The President, he said, had made a tactical error when he stepped down from his high office and told the people of this State how to vote.

Attacks His "Methods."

The voters, he added, "are not dumb cattle, but are able to make up their own minds in elections now as they have for the last 150 years."

Several times in both speeches Tydings paused in his attack to explain that he was not criticizing the Chief Executive.

"I do not attack the man but his methods," he explained.

Senator Tydings began his Towson speech with an answer to Representative Lewis' charges that he had blocked a Senate investigation of the milk industry in the Washington area.

His answer, in brief, was that the milk producers of Maryland, as well as Virginia and Pennsylvania, were opposed to the investigation on the ground that it was inspired by Western farmers who were trying to gain control of the Eastern market.

Bootlegged cream and milk are being sold in Washington and Baltimore, he charged, by representatives of Western dairy farmers, chiefly of Wisconsin, who are not bound by rigid District of Columbia health requirements.

Radiating confidence in the outcome of next Monday's primary, Senator Tydings predicted that he would "lick the whole damn bunch" of Federal officials and others who have come to the aid of Lewis.

Glad Lewis "Is Back."

Upon being informed of Lewis' statement at Annapolis tonight that the campaign is between Tydings and himself, the Senator told his Baltimore audience that he was glad Lewis "is back in the campaign."

"Our revered Chief Executive," he explained, had been put forward as his rival recently, "but I refused to run against him."

Citing President Roosevelt's participation in other senatorial contests over the country, Tydings asked his audience whether it would be wise to fill Congress with men who are obligated to the Chief Executive for their positions.

"That is the way they do things in dictator-ridden European countries," he said. "That is not the American way."

Tydings said that while he did not question "the high motives" of the President, he had seen him try to gain complete control of the United States Supreme Court, to reorganize the Federal Government, and to disburse without check $4,800,000,000 in relief funds.

Later in the evening Tydings defended his vote against the confirmation of Justice Black at a small meeting in a Catholic stronghold of Baltimore, and followed it with a talk to an enthusiastic gathering of taxicab drivers.

Lewis announced the huge allocations for new housing as an interpolated preamble to his Annapolis talk as news "the Housing Administration will announce tomorrow."

He said the Annapolis project would cost $478,000 and would house 100 families. The Baltimore project, he said, would cost $4,975,000 and would care for 1,102 families.

Raps Postmistress "Attack."

Turning back to his attack on his opponent's "lack of chivalry," Lewis deplored Tydings' "attack" on Mrs. Maude B. Toulson, postmistress at Salisbury, Md. Tydings had said she had tried to influence voters for Lewis.

"This lady," said Lewis, "came from a prominent Eastern Shore family . . . She was just 33 years of age when her husband, a pharmacist, was stricken with paralysis . . . His courageous wife surrendered her other activities, took over the drugstore and devoted herself to making a living for her husband and children.

"Many years later, when President Roosevelt came into office and the opportunity opened for the appointment of a new postmaster in Salisbury, the people of that city united in asking this lady's appointment.

She's "Vindicated."

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 7 (AP).—Mrs. Maude R. Toulson, Salisbury postmistress, denied tonight she had violated postoffice rules or ridden with Representative David J. Lewis when he was on the Eastern Shore campaigning against Senator Tydings for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Pat Casey, labor contract man for the Producers Association, described Kibre's charges as ridiculous.

"The whole thing is silly on the face of it," Casey said, "because we are constantly dealing with questions pertaining to wages and other matters at the studios not only with the I. A. T. S. E., but with various other organizations that maintain their independent unions.

"How would it be possible that these issues would be in constant controversy if any of the various unions were under any producer domination? Our dealings have always been with the international heads of the unions rather than the locals, and we are operating as always under the basic agreements reached some years ago."

Besides Twentieth Century-Fox, members of the association are M.-G.-M., Columbia, Paramount, Universal, RKO, Warner Brothers and Hal Roach.

Kibre charged studio employes were forced into the I. A. T. S. E. through a notice posted by producers saying such membership was a necessary condition of employment.

Since the closed shop agreement was reached and the notice posted, Kibre asserted, the various locals have been in sole charge of Browne and Bioff, who he said entered into other agreements favorable to the producers without authority from the locals.

Don't Let Constipation Drag On!

Do you often have days when you wake up tired—when you feel dull, sunk, "all bogged down"? It's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble!

If you eat what most people do—just bread, meat, potatoes—chances are that just this fact is responsible: you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines that helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, what you need is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains "bulk" plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and see if your old sparkle doesn't come back! Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

New Financing To Put U.S. Cash Near 2½ Billion

Morgenthau Denies Issue Linker to Crisis; Debt to Reach New High.

By Sidney Olson.

Announcing a sudden boost of the Treasury's cash working balance toward the $2,500,000,000 level, five times the normal total, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday specifically denied that the action reflected the possibility of a European war.

The huge balance, vast enough to meet any wartime monetary emergencies for many months, will be created by a new borrowing program, announced by the Secretary yesterday, and the September 15 quarterly income tax collections.

Morgenthau announced a total offering of $1,133,450,900 in bonds and notes for sale to the Nation's investors, in the first operation to finance the last Congress' mammoth spending-lending program.

$700,000,000 New Money.

The offer contemplates $700,000,000 of new money and the sale of $433,460,900 in securities to refinance an equal sum of Treasury notes maturing September 15.

Th new money, to be used in financing part of the estimated $3,000,000,000 deficit for the current fiscal year, included $400,000,000 in 12-14 year 2½ per cent Treasury bonds of 1950-52, and $300,000,000 of 1¼ per cent Treasury notes due June 15, 1943.

Holders of 1¼ per cent Treasury notes of series E-1938, maturing December 15, 1938, the Secretary announced, will be offered the privilege of exchanging such maturing notes for either the Treasury bonds or notes.

The Secretary said the $700,000,000 of new money will be "about one-third of the total to be sought during the coming fiscal year," and explained the difference between this figure and the expected $500,000,000 only by remarking that the market for borrowing is favorable.

Observers noted that an upset money market, such as would occur during a war, would make new money considerably more expensive.

Debt to Reach New Peak.

Thus September 15, issue date of the new securities, will find the gross public debt at another new all-time peak for this country, totaling then about $38,300,000,000. Even this sum will be topped in the next year, however, as it will soar over $40,000,000,000, due to heavy increases in public works, relief and recovery program spending.

By next week the debt therefore will be $22,000,000,000 more than the postwar low of December 31, 1930, and $12,000,000,000 more than the wartime high of August 31, 1919.

Some observers, pondering the new issues, held that while the war scare and the resultant continued gold influx were valid reasons for the operation, a simpler explanation was merely that present interest rates are low, and thus borrowing now is likely to be cheaper than after a business revival when the money market would see other customers than the Government seeking new capital.

Rate Still Lowest.

The offerings of yesterday were not the cheapest recorded, since the Treasury has borrowed on the same low rates for longer periods, but the rates nevertheless are still the lowest ever offered investors in Government issues.

The Treasury will continue to sell its weekly offerings of 91-day bills totaling $100,000,000, the Secretary said, "until further notice." These do not affect the Federal debt as the proceeds pay off weekly maturing bills.

The Treasury has an interest payment on the public debt of $153,000,000 to meet September 15, as well as a $17,000,000 note issue to meet in cash. No further new money will be sought during the present calendar year, the Secretary indicated.

The first effect of the huge borrowing, it was noted, besides boosting the cash working balance in the Treasury, will be to decrease excess reserves of the Nation's banks, now near an all-time record, and increase bank deposits.

The public debt stood yesterday at $37,628,266,920. President Roosevelt's July estimate figured its ultimate level in the current fiscal year, ending next July 1, as about $40,650,000,000.

'Hidden' Money Helps Tydings, Lewis Charges sent out by Morris Schapiro, head of the Boston Iron & Metal Co., for a dinner in honor of Tydings.

"At this dinner," said Lewis, "Mr. Schapiro introduced Mr. Tydings as 'one who has done me a great favor which I want to repay.' Mr. Tydings, replying, is reported by the guests to have said: 'Yes, I have done Mr. Schapiro a great favor, and he is a man who does not forget those favors.' This favor, according to word passed out at the dinner, was a $5,000 gift to the Tydings campaign fund on behalf of Mr. Schapiro and associates.

"As you know, Secretary Roper has charged Mr. Tydings with lobbying on behalf of the sale of 124 Government-owned ships to the Boston Iron and Metal Co."

The text of Lewis' letter follows:

"Reliable information reaching my active friends indicates that the campaign expenditures of Senator Tydings have been far in excess of those reported to your committee. They report to me that some of Tydings' workers privately place these expenditures at as much as $200,000.

"Many of these, of course, are hidden, or are side expenditures by committees or private individuals which Mr. Tydings fails to note in his expense account, but which should none-the-less be listed in accordance with the corrupt practices act.

"I particularly invite your attention to the enclosed letter sent by Morris Schapiro, head of the Boston Iron & Metal Co., about a dinner in honor of Senator Tydings. At this dinner, Mr. Schapiro introduced Mr. Tydings as "one who has done me a great favor which I want to repay." Mr. Tydings, replying, is reported by the guests to have said: "Yes, I have done Mr. Schapiro a great favor, and he is a man who does not forget those favors." This favor, according to word passed out at the dinner, was a $5,000 gift to the Tydings campaign fund on behalf of Mr. Schapiro and associates.

"As you know, Secretary Roper has charged Mr. Tydings with lobbying on behalf of the sale of 124 Government-owned ships to the Boston Iron & Metal Co.

"In view of the fact that Mr. Tydings failed to list any contribution from Mr. Schapiro other than a concealed gift by one of his secretaries, I suggest that you secure the temporary assistance of Federal Trade Commission investigators to examine the books of the Boston Iron & Metal Co., the Globe Brewing Co., and other firms associated with Mr. Schapiro. As you know, the Federal Trade Commission has had a great deal of experience in ferreting out these concealed statements on the books of the power companies during the investigation of the Power Trust.

"I also suggest that you make a similar examination of the books of other companies and individuals associated with them who are listed only as moderate contributors. Friends active in my campaign report that while only nominal amounts have been listed, these firms, or those who represent them, actually have made much more substantial contributions."

Gov. Benson Quotes Roosevelt as Saying There Must Be a Farmer-Labor Hook-Up.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Sept. 7.—Farmer-Labor Gov. Benson, back from an airplane trip to Hyde Park, where he conferred with President Roosevelt, in an interview today quoted Mr. Roosevelt as saying he feels "there definitely must be a hook-up between the farmer and the laborer."

GOV. BENSON.

The Governor said, however, he did not know whether the President intended to come to Minnesota to give indorsement to the Farmer-Labor Party.

Two years ago various Democratic candidates in Minnesota for State offices withdrew before the election and Farmer-Labor candidates won those offices.

The Governor said Mr. Roosevelt promised to broaden the farm-export plan and to further the program for purchase of surplus commodities as well as to increase the loan value on spring wheat. He said the President intended to present new farm legislation to the next Congress.

Albuquerque, N. Mex.—United States District Judge Colin P. Neblett instructed a grand jury today to investigate a "common rumor" that graft existed in the Works Progress Administration in New Mexico.

"There have been presented to me a number of affidavits which charge grafting by certain persons in the WPA," Judge Neblett said.

"They charge that these poor people have been grafted upon. Such matters can't go on in this community."

Judge Neblett told the jury to investigate charges that payrolls have been padded, that workers have been assigned to public projects and taken to work on private jobs, or political campaigns.

Dig

ing of tombstone inscriptions in Bruton churchyard showed the manuscripts were hidden at Jamestown before 1635 and later reburied here.

Some of the church vestrymen and citizens of Williamsburg are frankly and fervently skeptical of her claims, but her zeal induced vestrymen to allow her to dig in the churchyard. The restoration has no connection with the matter.

Her efforts led to excavation during the past week of foundations, 66 by 28 feet, believed to be those of the church built about 1677 as predecessor building of the existing Bruton Parish Church. Within the rectangle of those foundations, asserts Mrs. Bauer, lies her treasure in manuscripts, "written on parchment and sealed in copper tubes and jars of baked Spanish clay."

Mrs. Bauer said she verified her code study results by running a linear survey from the old Christopher Wren Building at William and Mary College to find a point in the churchyard at the tomb of Edward Nott. Digging there revealed brickwork about a foot below the ground. Further excavation, still under way, outlined the foundations of a building, which it is agreed was the church built in the 1670's for the congregation of "Middle Plantation," now Williamsburg.

These persons assert Mrs. Bauer dug first beneath the tower of the existing church without success; that she studied the 1699 Bland map of this old colonial capital; that she checked her theories with surveyors, and that still uncovered foundations lie throughout Williamsburg.

Asserting she is "very logical" in her deductions, Mrs. Bauer came here in June.

Dr. L. W. Roberts, senior warden of the vestry, said, "We knew the (old) church was here, but not where. She showed us where to dig; she said she used a code. The vestry has not decided what it will do about digging for the vault."

Johnstown Mayor Cleared of Charge Of Strike Bribery

Ebensburg, Pa., Sept. 7 (AP).—The Cambria County grand jury early this evening refused to indict Mayor Daniel J. Shields and Councilman Fulton L. Connor, of Johnstown on charges of bribery, extortion and malfeasance in office.

The charges grew out of testimony before the National Labor Relations Board hearing into the "Little Steel" strike here in 1937 that the mayor received more than $36,000 from the Bethlehem Steel Co., of which $25,000 went to Connor.

The mayor testified before the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee in Washington certain monies had been contributed by the steel company to help preserve law and order during the strike.

Store Pickets Claw Hair in San Francisco

300 Extra Police Called to Shopping District After Clashes.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Sept. 7.—Smartly dressed women pickets clawed non-strikers and brought 300 extra policemen to the shopping district today in a retail clerks' strike against 35 major department stores.

Vacation schedules and all days off were canceled by police after the early reports of violence precipitated by the stores' opening on time for "business as usual."

Three disturbances resulted when women pickets sought to prevent nonunion employes from entering two stores. The first, at Hale Brothers, was calmed by three policemen and a mounted officer, who warned pickets to cease "manhandling" persons wishing to go to work. A patrol wagon was placed near the store entrance, and there was no further turmoil.

Women Pull Hair.

As women employes walked in pairs to the store entrance, women pickets grabbed them, pulled at their hair and attempted to drag them from the door. Police said few actual blows were struck, and that most of the violence consisted of pulling, pushing and general roughing.

Two similar demonstrations were handled by police at the Emporium, the city's biggest department store. What police termed "wild confusion" broke out when pickets noticed two guards escorting workers from across the street to the store entrance.

Pickets surged across the street to prevent progress of the convoyed employes. Streetcar and automobile traffic was blocked for 30 minutes.

Later women pickets pulled girl employes from the store entrance. Several pocketbooks fell to the sidewalk during the scuffling and police after rescuing the girls assisted them in picking up lip sticks and powder puffs.

Parley a Failure.

The strike, which one employer spokesman said might spread to 50 stores, went into effect at 7 a. m., after a final peace conference yesterday failed to bring agreement on a union demand for a registered list from which employes would be chosen, and a storewide seniority plan. Employers demanded the right to choose their own workers and held out for a department instead of storewide seniority arrangement.

Union leaders termed the walkout the biggest of its kind ever called in the United States.

Two arrests were made—spectators who refused to obey a police officer's order to move on.

Pledges of support came to strike headquarters from many unions and from the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, comprising 20,000 longshoremen and waterfront workers. Warehousemen, also engaged in a strike, pledged their support.

Capt. Albert Munn instructed pickets not to call non-strikers "finks" or "scabs" or other epithets. So strikers chanted: "The police won't let us call you finks or scabs—you strikebreakers."

Most of the stores apparently had adequate staffs, and after a quiet early-morning opening the number of customers increased rapidly.

2 Jail Breakers Chased, Seized In Alexandria

3 Who Escaped With Them in Warrenton Still at Large Near D. C.

A high speed chase that began yesterday in the northern section of Alexandria, Va., when a car drove away from a filling station without paying for gas ended in the capture of two of the five youths who staged a break Monday night from the Warrenton, Va., jail.

Alexandria police listed the pair as Roy Reid, 19, of New Baltimore, Va., and Edward Roberts, 18, of Warrenton.

Reid and Roberts, who were being held in connection with a series of filling station hold-ups, were turned over to Warrenton authorities after their capture.

Police quoted the pair as saying they left two of their companions in the break Monday at Potomac Yards Tuesday night and the third in Washington yesterday. District police, however, said they had received no lookout calls.

Reid and Roberts were captured after their automobile crashed through a fence at Newton and Windsor streets in Alexandria.

Both fled on foot. Reed attempted to hide in a tree in the rear of a house on West Peyton street but came down from his perch at the point of a gun in the hand of Policeman George Embrey. Roberts was overtaken on foot.

The two, along with Carroll Roberts, 19, Edward Sudduth, 24, and James Embrey, 26, escaped from the Warrenton jail after striking the 81-year-old jailer, J. W. Shirley, over the head and taking his keys.

Alexandria police said the two drove into the filling station of Harry Scott, purchased gas and then sped away without paying. Scott, with a friend, Ralph Skeel, gave chase. Policemen Embrey and Claude Nixon joined the chase as the fleeing car crashed.

The automobile, which police said the youths told them was stolen in Clintonville, Md., contained an ownership registration card bearing the name of Harriet B. Dugan, 124 Lanvale avenue, Baltimore.

District Youth Is Indicted for 60-Cent Theft

A 60-cent theft from a cash box in an apartment in the Brentwood Village Corporation, 3433 Fourteenth street northeast, last August, led to the indictment yesterday of Gerald E. Welkel, 21. The youth was charged with housebreaking and larceny.

In another indictment returned to Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue yesterday, the grand jury charged Kenneth F. Nash with larceny after trust in connection with the alleged larceny of a diamond ring valued at $1,150, belonging to William H. Bachschmid, of 4403 New Hampshire avenue northwest. The ring is said to have been pawned in a Maryland shop.

Theft of clothing led to the grand larceny indictment of Warren Johnson and Richard A. Chisholm, both colored, from a downtown department store.

Others indicted were: Kenneth L. Frye, Charles H. Gallison and Kenneth L. Frye, grand larceny; John B. Smith, Allen B. Weaver, Irvin Hurdle and George C. Nicholas, joy-riding; Frank G. Thomas, Daniel S. Russell, Garfield S. Creasman, John B. Smith, Irvin Hurdle, George C. Nicholas, Charles D. Francusm and Ralph S. Nortner, housebreaking; Christopher C. McDonald, grand larceny and robbery; Neal Samuel, gaming charges; Samuel Bolden, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1934, and John T. Kay, forgers and uttering.

Fall of Horse Kills Paul Brower, Sales Chief for Bakery

Paul Brower, 38, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital of injuries he suffered when a horse threw him several days ago near Rockville, Md.

Mr. Brower, a native of New York, had been in Washington for a year. He was regional sales director of the Continental Baking Corporation here.

A graduate of Syracuse University, Mr. Brower was a member of the Potomac Boat Club and the Congressional Country Club. In college he rowed on the varsity crew, and later won recognition as a sculler.

Mr. Brower leaves his wife of two months, Mrs. Vivian Brower, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Brower, of New York.

Services will be held tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. in Speare's funeral home, 1009 H street northwest. Burial will be private.

Climax Is Near As C. I. O. Aides Talk to Martin

Murray and Hillman Are in Detroit With U. A. W. Peace Formula.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 7.—Negotiations that may test the ties binding Homer Martin's United Automobile Workers to John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization moved slowly toward a climax in an air of secrecy tonight.

Two of Lewis' trusted lieutenants, Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, were in Detroit to present the C. I. O. leader's formula for peace in the U. A. W. to the Auto Workers' international executive board.

Before they talked to the board Murray and Hillman, accompanied by Lee Pressman, C. I. O. general counsel, conferred with Martin behind closed doors. The conference lasted more than three hours. When they left, both C. I. O. and U. A. W. refused to comment on rumors of a compromise.

Lewis' proposal, which Martin spurned in a Washington meeting August 25, calls for reinstatement of five "disciplined" U. A. W. officers and submission of all controversial matters to the C. I. O. for mediation pending the regular U. A. W. convention next August.

Such a plan, Martin has said, would destroy the U. A. W. autonomy.

Observers predicted only a compromise by one or both sides in the dispute could prevent a definite split. In the event of secession from the C. I. O., Martin might set up an independent union or return to the A. F. of L., out of which he led the auto workers in April, 1936.

Cement Firm Ordered Drop A.F.L. for C.I.O.

The C. I. O. won another Labor Relations Board victory over the A. F. of L. yesterday when the board ordered the Cowell Portland Cement Co., Cowell, Calif., to cease giving effect to its closed-shop contract with the federation's Lime and Cement Employes Union of Contra Costa County.

The company was told to grant exclusive bargaining rights to the C. I. O.'s International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers as 177 of the 185 employes in the appropriate bargaining unit had designated the C. I. O. union as their bargaining representative July 15, 1938.

5 Badly Burned In Yacht Blast Off Floodgate

Central Figure in Mary Baker Murder Is Badly Hurt.

Four men were burned seriously in a gasoline explosion and fire aboard the 40-foot cabin cruiser Helma, anchored off the Floodgate Boathouse late yesterday. A youth was burned slightly.

The victims, all of whom suffered second degree burns of their faces, arms and chests, were rushed to Emergency Hospital. They were Herbert M. Campbell, 48, of the Cavalier Hotel, who was acquitted of the murder of Mary Baker, Navy Department clerk, more than eight years ago; his brother, Frank Campbell, 58, of 1915 Arlington Ridge road, Arlington; their cousin, Loudoun Campbell, 32, of 1025 South Twentieth street, Arlington, and Junius Mosby, 37, colored cook, of the 1300 block of Neal place northwest.

Youth Slightly Hurt.

An 18-year-old youth, Robert Kellogg, who lives on the yacht Tech, nearby, was slightly burned by the blast. He was aboard the Helma, but required no hospital treatment.

Gasoline, apparently ignited by a spark, exploded as the men were cleaning the bilges of the $30,000 craft, which was built in California.

The victims leaped overboard, and the flames were doused by the water. Several windows in the cruiser were shattered, and the big boat was otherwise badly damaged.

Blast Seared Bodies.

The Campbells were preparing the ship for a trip down the river and into Chesapeake Bay, friends said last night. The blast seared their limbs and bodies and scorched their eyebrows and hair.

Capital National Guard Gets Ruling on Meeting

Acting Controller General Richard N. Elliot ruled yesterday that the District National Guard might send only one representative to the San Francisco convention of the National Guard Association late this month. He decided that two delegates as originally contemplated could not be sent since funds are not available under the current appropriation. About $550 would be needed for two officers and the travel funds of the Guard now stand at $300.

U. S. Drivers Seen Missing Death by A Second or Less

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 7.—One-fifth of American drivers avoid risk of sudden death in head-on collision by less than one second.

Swing music cuts down the production of American girl workers if played when they are on the job.

These two findings of psychological investigators were reported today at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association, which opened four days of sessions at Ohio State University.

The habit of 20 per cent of drivers on the open road on two-lane highways of allowing less than a second to clear an oncoming car was discovered with moving pictures taken from a moving car by T. W. Forbes and T. M. Matson, of Yale University.

U. S. Seeks Ruling On Deportation of Alien Communists

By the Associated Press.

The Government asked the Supreme Court yesterday to settle definitely the question whether an alien who at one time was a member of the Communist Party is subject to deportation under a statute enacted in 1918.

A petition signed by Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson and Gerald P. Reilly, Solicitor for the Labor Department, asked the high court to review a Sixth Circuit Court ruling that Austrian-born Joseph G. Strecker, of Hot Springs, Ark., was not subject to deportation.

Interest in the outcome of the Strecker case has been broadened by its bearing upon the future of Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader.

The Labor Department suspended deportation proceedings against Bridges until after a final decision on Strecker.

Telegraph Strike Supported by CIO

By the United Press.

The C. I. O. last night pledged full support to the American Communications Association as that union prepared to take a strike vote among 75,000 Western Union and Postal Telegraph employes.

C. I. O. Director John Brophy, approving of the strike threat against the telegraph companies, charged that the wire services are planning to take advantage of a technical flaw in the wage-hour law to slash the total compensation of employes by 8.3 per cent when hours are reduced to 44 per week in accord with the new statute.

Pickpocket Robs Man, 75.

Thomas J. Calloway, 75, of 3100 Connecticut avenue northwest, reported his pocket picked of $19 yesterday while boarding a street car at Seventh and F streets northwest.

Peggy Fears Asks 'Blumy' to Name Men or Shut Up

New York, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—Peggy Fears, the brown-eyed Texas songbird who has been in and out of court trying to collect alimony from A. C. Blumenthal, today yodelled a challenge all the way from Hollywood for her wandering papa to name the men in her life or shut up about them.

Peggy's demand was filed in supreme court by her attorney, Max D. Steur, after her pint-sized husband accused her of chasing him all over New York and entertaining boy friends in her spare time.

Miss Fears now is job-hunting in Hollywood. Blumenthal is on the Normandie with June Lang, the streamlined Hollywood venus, his current attachment.

Shortly after Blumenthal, a former side-kick of former Mayor Jimmy Walker, was mentioned in the Gloria Vanderbilt case as a friend, he and Peggy separated. She now claims $70,000 in back alimony, but she says $40,000 will do very nicely.

2 Beaten, Burned to Death.

Philadelphia, Sept. 7 (AP).—Two men, beaten and burned, were found dead today in a sunflower patch in the northeastern section of the city. Police believed they were Louis Cole, 45, and Jack Eisenhart, 45, of Philadelphia.

France Places 1,200,000 Men On War Basis

350,000 Sent to Reich Border in Pledge to Aid Czechs.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 7.—France spurred military preparations tonight by mobilizing all Marseille dock-workers and sending more troops toward the German frontier in apprehension of conflict developing from the German-Czechoslovak quarrel.

Pledged to aid Czechoslovakia from foreign attack, France speeded additional reserve troops to her eastern border, bringing to 1,200,000 unofficial estimates of the soldiers under arms or standing by for orders from Premier Daladier.

The Marseille mobilization put an estimated 5,000 dock-workers under military discipline at the nation's vital gateway to the huge manpower of her colonial empire.

Report Immediately.

Reserves and overlapping classes of new recruits have swelled the 700,000-man standing army that France ordinarily maintains.

Circles close to the interior ministry reported instructions relative to war mobilization had been sent to the prefects of each of the nation's 93 departments in France and Algeria.

Another important development was a communique issued by the general confederation of labor indicating that workers of the powerful organization will co-operate in strengthening national defense.

The 5,000,000-member confederation had fought Daladier's moves to end the 40-hour work week, but the communique showed willingness to favor longer hours in view of the threatening international situation.

A war ministry order instructed an undetermined number of reservists to report immediately for duty on the Maginot line facing Germany.

250,000 on Duty.

Notifying them to report at concentration points where only three weeks ago they finished two years compulsory military service, the order was said to concern only the lowest military class—infantry fortress troops of the second class.

Normal garrison of the Maginot line is estimated at 100,000 men, but officers in the region of eastern France estimated 350,000 as the present strength.

A sub-committee of the Chamber of Deputies army committee met in secret session to discuss the present state of arms and munitions manufacturing in France over which the government has control.

The prefect of Seine-et-Oise department, which surrounds Paris, and the Seine department head notified municipalities that air-raid siren drill will start tomorrow.

Border Armies Strengthened.

Rosbruck, on the French-German frontier, Sept. 7 (AP).—French and German armies on opposite sides of the border moved reinforcements and supplies up from the rear today while frontier populations anxiously watched every development in the Czechoslovak crisis.

Trains carrying reservists of French classes which finished their regular period of military service in 1934, 1935, and 1936 dropped a few officers at Nancy and Metz, but the reservists went direct to stations "somewhere on the Maginot Line" and immediately donned uniforms.

Rosbruck, a little town of several hundred inhabitants, is split by the frontier, which is marked by a high wire fence. The only passage through it is at the customs-houses.

Rosbruck townsfolk habitually gather along the fence in the evenings to chat. Tonight, however, when friends met, guards on the German side stood near by and listened to the conversations. They explained apologetically to the townsfolk that they were acting under "orders."

Belgium Prepares.

Paris, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—Belgium, like France, is taking extensive "security measures" along her eastern frontier adjoining Germany and has arranged for speedy mobilization of her fighting forces, it was revealed tonight.

Switzerland, it was disclosed, is accelerating the fortification of her northern and eastern frontiers.

Mexican Civil Servants Voted Right to Strike

Mexico City, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Senate today approved President Lazaro Cardenas' civil service bill giving federal employes the right to strike. The measure was passed by the Chamber of Deputies yesterday and now goes to the president for his signature. It grants government employes labor organization privileges enjoyed by workers in private industry.

Hitler Reviews 40,000 Chanters In 'Nursery School' for Army

Labor Service Members Sing, 'All Who Are Germans Must Belong to Germany' in Pointing to Sudetens at Nuremberg.

By the United Press.

Nuremberg, Germany, Sept. 7.—More than 40,000 bronzed stalwarts of the German Labor Service, the "nursery school" of the Reich's armies, paraded past Reichs Fuehrer Hitler today in drizzling rain chanting: "All who are Germans must belong to Germany."

A red and white banner fluttering over the meadow where they marched, in the first big mass demonstration of the Nazi Party Congress, gave significance to their chant.

On it were inscribed the words: "We Sudeten Germans greet der Fuehrer."

Hitler stood in an open automobile with hand upraised in Nazi salute as the rain ran in rivulets from the visor of his khaki cap.

Included 2,000 Women.

The chant of the labor corps, marching with shiny shovels over their shoulders, went:

"There is still much suffering
"Prayers are sent to the Lord God to take misery from us.
"God listens to the nation's prayer.
"And causes Der Fuehrer to act;
"Neither war nor frontiers designed by man
"Are able to destroy the Reich.
"God is stronger than the hostile powers,
"And all who are Germans must belong to Germany."

Marching with the goose-stepping men of the Labor Service, who must serve six months in the corps before beginning their terms of military conscription, were 2,000 young German women. They too carried shovels.

Nazi officials denied that the Labor Service, including men who in recent weeks have been working night and day to complete Germany's fortifications in the Rhineland and on other borders, were armed with rifles. Three foreign newspaper correspondents reported, however, that they saw trucks loaded with more than 200 men of the labor corps and that the men carried army issue rifles.

Praises Spade Symbol.

The highlight of the spectacle came when a member of the labor service, standing in front of Hitler, handed a bright spade to a member of the new Austrian labor corps, saying:

"My comrade who stands on this spot for your comrades from Austria, take in front of the people this German spade. When you return to your homeland carry it as steadfastly as we have."

Hitler told the Austrians:

"For the first time I greet the men of work from my own homeland. You have not only symbolically but really come into the great front of the new German community. For this community has no more beautiful symbol than the spade.

"You are fighting for the rebuilding of Germany but you also are fighting for the defense of the Reich, because this spade creates new ground and makes safe the old soil of the Reich. You are working everywhere—north, south, east and west—for the security of the Reich."

Democracies Ridiculed.

Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, head of the foreign department of the National Socialist Party, addressed the congress tonight on the "failures" of democracy and its "inevitable supercession" by national socialism.

"What was to be understood as a magnanimous production by Washington, the United States Constitution," he said, "was already disfigured by phraseology inspired by the so-called rights of man ideas of the French Revolution."

Rumania Shows Inclination for Aiding Czechs

Neutrality Impossible for Long, Press Hints in Anti-Nazi Stand.

By the United Press.

Bucharest, Rumania, Sept. 7.—Should the Czech crisis lead to armed conflict, Germany eventually would find Rumania against her, foreign observers said today.

The Rumanian press, which the government strictly controls, and which therefore reflects the government's viewpoint more or less, denounces the Reich's policy toward Czechoslovakia with increasing vigor.

Even papers which heretofore openly professed sympathies for Nazism and Fascism make no exception so far as present criticism of Germany is concerned. Editorials praise what they call the Czechs' "exemplary discipline."

A number of papers recently printed an article by the Czech Minister, Dr. Ferdinand Veverka, on Czecho-Rumanian friendship. The attitude of the press was interpreted as aiming to prepare public opinion for Rumania's eventual aid to Czechoslovakia.

Diplomatic observers, however, are convinced that in case of war Rumania will try so long as possible to preserve her neutrality, but they doubt that she can remain aloof for more than a few months.

Hungarians likewise wonder whether they would be able to escape should the armies of the Third Reich and the Soviet Union collide. There seems to be no doubt that Hungary wishes to maintain her neutrality in event of a Czech-German clash. And even ardent pro-Germans do not advocate Hungary's entering a war on Germany's side, knowing that in reality such an act would be a disservice, since a Hungarian attack on Czechoslovakia would bring Rumania and Yugoslavia into the fight. Both the last-named are members of the Little Entente, forged by France in postwar years as a defense against Hungary.

The question many Hungarians ask, however, is whether neutrality ultimately would not be made impossible by Soviet help to Czechoslovakia. It is feared the Soviets might not be able to use Rumanian territory, and, as an alternative, might violate the Hungarian frontier in sending aid to Czechoslovakia.

Japan Feels Neutral.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tokyo, (Thursday) Sept. 8.—In event of European war, Japan will remain neutral, according to the consensus of opinion in Japanese government, army and navy circles. Japan is not bound by the anti-Comintern Pact to take the side of Germany and Italy, although it is evident that Japan's sympathies would be with the totalitarian camps.

Even if the Soviet Union should become involved in war, in support of Czechoslovakia, Japan does not desire a war with Russia at this time while the Japanese army is so deeply immersed in the war with China.

There is always the possibility, however, that if Russia should show signs of exhaustion or collapse, Japan would be tempted to invade eastern Siberia.

Japan's reluctance to support Germany or Italy in a European war is the equivalent of Germany's and Italy's reluctance to support Japan in a war with the Soviet Union, such as threatened at the time of the Changkufeng border trouble early last month. Both the German and Italian Ambassadors here cautioned moderation at the time and informed the Japanese government that it could not count upon German or Italian aid.

Vatican Views Racial Creed in Italy as 'Error'

Pope's Attitude Reflected in Paper; Jews Warned Against Boycott.

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Sept. 7.—Fresh evidence of discord between the Vatican and Fascism over the new Italian race doctrine appeared today in L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper.

The newspaper attributed to Pope Pius the view that the anti-Semitic doctrine "concerns a great and serious error which reaches the steps of the altar, touching Catholic doctrine."

Simultaneously a Fascist warning was given to Jews abroad that a boycott of Italian goods might work against Jews in Italy.

Il Giornale d'Italia, edited by the authoritative Fascist, Virginio Gayda, commented on a dispatch telling of a move by London Jews to boycott Italian goods.

"Purge" Continues.

"The fate of Italian Hebrews is still in the balance," said Gayda.

"But it is certain that if Hebrews of two worlds want to mix themselves in unadvised gestures, the situation of Italian Hebrews might become rather serious."

Meanwhile, the movement to eliminate Jews from official life proceeded steadily. In Milan a Jewish lawyer, Vittorio Sacerdoti, resigned from the bar as a result of the racial program announced July 14. Numerous Jewish army and navy officers were reported to have resigned.

Definite measures to remove Jews from government posts and limit their participation in Italian life in ratio to the percentage of Jews in the population were expected to be adopted by the Fascist grand council October 1.

The Italian press did not publish the remarks attributed to Pope Pius by L'Osservatore Romano, but the Vatican newspaper devoted half of its front page to a digest of them, under the caption, "Luminous words of the Holy Father to Catholic Action teachers."

The Pope was not quoted directly by the newspaper in his remarks yesterday to 400 Italian school teachers at Castel Gandolfo. The following, in part, was L'Osservatore's summary:

"His holiness mentioned the cardinal points of racialism set by university teachers. To these points were appended a series of comments and it is not known whether they were made by the writers of the points or by those who published them.

"Nevertheless, the idea in these comments have been repeated and spread everywhere through the Italian and foreign press and are taking ground everywhere. It concerns a great and serious error which reaches the steps of the altar, touching Catholic doctrine."

Chilean President Gets Wide Powers

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—The Senate tonight voted President Arturo Alessandri "extraordinary powers" to cope with the situation created by Monday's abortive National Socialist (Nazi) Party uprising in which 62 persons were killed.

The President was given the powers for 20 days. The state of seige he proclaimed in Santiago shortly after Monday's disorders began, will be extended to the entire country for the same period.

The President will be empowered to restrict personal liberty and prohibit public assembly if the nation's defense and preservation of constitutional government require such action.

Franco Resumes Valencia Thrust, Stalled 2 Months

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, Sept. 7.—The Spanish insurgent command today reported its Teruel-Sagunto road drive toward Valencia, stalled since July, had been resumed.

Government dispatches announced renewed fighting near Viver, 34 miles northwest of Valencia.

Insurgents on the Ebro front followed up a government retreat by placing artillery in control of highways, making government traffic virtually impossible.

French Set Knighthood For Walter Lippmann

Paris, Sept. 7.—The French government has informed Walter Lippmann, whose articles appears in The Post, of its intention to appoint him a Knight of the Legion of Honor. This distinction will be conferred in Washington, by the French Ambassador, Count Rene Doynal de Saint-Quentin. Lippmann, who has been spending the summer in Europe, is returning to the United States this month.

Lawyers Claim U.S. Arms Go to Reich Illegally

Export, Allowed by State Dept., Held Violating Treaty, Neutral Act.

The National Lawyers Guild yesterday renewed charges that the Administration's present policy of permitting the exportation of munitions to Germany constitutes a violation of both the Treaty of Peace with Germany signed August 25, 1921, and the existing neutrality act.

The charged, made in a report published by the international law committee of the District of Columbia Chapter of the guild, have been sent to President Roosevelt and the Secretaries of State, Treasury, War, Navy and Commerce, who constitute the Munitions Control Board operating under the neutrality act.

The report pointed out that the peace treaty between the United States and Germany included an article which provided that importation into Germany of farms, munition and war material of every kind shall be strictly prohibited. Despite this provision, the report asserted Germany, under authorization of the Munitions Board, imported $1,869,185 in munitions from the United States, from January 1, 1936, December 31, 1937.

McCarran Wins By 3-1 Margin In Nevada Race

Senator Promises to Back Roosevelt When Right, Oppose Him in Wrong.

By the Associated Press.

Reno, Nev., Sept. 7.—Senator Pat McCarran, an occasional Administration opponent, won Democratic renomination by nearly a 3-to-1 margin over two "100 per cent New Deal" rivals, it was shown today by virtually complete returns from yesterday's primary election.

Returns from 247 of the State's 262 precincts, some from remote and sparsely populated regions still incomplete, gave McCarran 15,882 votes; Albert Hilliard, Reno attorney, 4,730, and Dr. John E. Worden, 851.

Former Senator Tasker L. Oddie won the Republican senatorial nomination without contest.

E. P. Carville, former U. S. district attorney here, won the Democratic nomination for Governor over two opponents. John A. Fulton, director of the University of Nevada School of Mines, was the apparent Republican nominee.

Senator McCarran thanked Nevadans "for a splendid response to a call that demanded independence of thought."

"I will sustain and support the Executive of the Nation," he said, "as I have sustained him in the past when he was right. I will oppose him when he is wrong. I will be true to my oath to uphold and defend the Constitution."

James G. Scrugham, Nevada's only Congressman, was unopposed for renomination as a Democrat, and former Mayor Harry Stewart had no opposition for the Republican nomination.

In the finals young Phillips was hard put by Norman Sweeny, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Sweeny, of 4112 Perry street, Brentwood, until Sweeny met disaster by breaking his peanut with an overenthusiastic nozzle.

Fun, Satire Abound In 'Hold That Co-Ed'

Capitol's Premiere Film Is as Looney as Life, With Barrymore in No. 1 Spot; Which Comes First, the Lady or the Cowboy?

By Gerald G. Gross,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

IF YOU come walking out of Loew's Capitol tomorrow or any day during the following week mumbling, "A very nice comedy, indeed, but my! my! it's so far fetched, so impossible," you'd better scan your headlines, past and present.

For if the role of Gov. Gabby Harrigan in "Hold That Co-Ed," as played magnificently by John Barrymore, was not inspired by the shenanigans of the late Senator Huey P. Long with his Louisiana State football team then a super-colossal coincidence has occurred.

If Gabby's promise of $400 a month to every man, woman and child reaching the age of 60 seems preposterous, look to your Townsends and your Downeys. Thirty dollars every Thursday does not quite add up to $400 per month but what is a mere difference in degree?

Too, it may be pointed out that the football playing brothers in "Hold That Co-Ed" have been endowed with a film name—something like Bergerski or Gerberski—that is remindful of Mr. Bronko Nagurski, of the Chicago Bears. The brothers also rassle, as does Mr. Nagurski.

Please understand, I don't wish to make a point that the Twentieth Century-Fox gridsical, to coin a questionable word, is a celluloid condensation of today's headlines. It is as batty as a belfry, loco as a puppy, but "Hold That Co-Ed" is only holding up a mirror, only slightly distorted, to our ways of playing politics, if not football. Not football, no sir, Darryl Zanuck. No football game will ever be won as it is in "Hold——then again there was that time Roy Riegels ran in the wrong direction, wasn't there?

Anyway, "Hold That Co-Ed" was finally previewed at the Fox exchange, after much difficulty in getting a print, and it turned out to be an unqualified triumph for John Barrymore and a three-bell achievement in the script writers' caps. With its world premiere scheduled for the Capitol tomorrow, it comes to Washington at a time that could not have been better chosen. Appetites are ripe for anything with a gridiron slant and with interest in the coming Maryland primary at such a high pitch the broad satirical thrusts of "Hold That Co-Ed" are a sure fire cinch.

Samuel Goldwyn may yet have to go to court because the title of his Gary Cooper-Merle Oberon starring picture, "The Lady and the Cowboy," is challenged by heirs of the late Clyde Fitch, famous American playwright of grandpa's time. They say it's too similar to "The Cowboy and the Lady," which Fitch wrote 30 years ago. Paramount recently lodged a protest with Goldwyn, having made a film of the play in 1922. The rival studio, however, withdrew its objections finally but the Fitch heirs reportedly are not yet placated. "Frankly," says Frances Manson, Goldwyn's story editor, "Hollywood is running out of different titles and we feel that 'The Lady and the Cowboy' is sufficiently different from 'The Cowboy and the Lady' to permit its use by us." But here's the payoff: As one of the 94 film subjects in the current $250,000 quiz contest, it's listed in the booklet as "The Cowboy and the Lady."

Sara Ann McCabe, alias "America's newest voice thrill," has been added to the stage show which opens tomorrow at Warner Brothers Earle.

Harry Anger, the Earle's production manager, "scouted" Miss McCabe on Labor Day when she was appearing with Ben Bernie at the Strand Theater in New York. He rushed backstage after her number and got her signature on the dotted line pronto.

Chester Morris headlines the new vaudeville program with "Racket Busters" as the feature on the screen.

A young man in uniform yclept Mr. WU, according to the identification on his shoulder, brings news which is happy, indeed, for the procrastinating among you. It says: "CAREFREE STAYS FOR ANOTHER WEEK REGARDS," and is signed "HARDIE." That would mean the gay and frothy RKO picture starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers is entering its third week at Keith's, by the good word of Manager Hardie Meakin. Maybe it'll do four, five—even six—but rather than banking on such a possibility it would be the better part of wisdom to seize your first opportunity to catch "Carefree," which should rank among the first 10 motion pictures of 1938.

• • • •

Abbreviatedly yours: When "Carefree" silently folds up its tunes and lams its way out of Keith's the succeeding picture will be "The Affairs of Annabel," with Jack Oakie and Lucille Bell, instead of "Youth Takes a Fling," as previously announced . . . first appearance of the M-G-M Toinette marionettes today will be at the Washington City Orphan Asylum at noon . . . there'll be public showings in the Monument grounds from 2 to 4 and 6 to 8 p. m. . . . Billy Gilbert, in "Army Girl," the Met's next, was born in the dressing room of a Louisville theater . . . he was a heavyweight boxer before he found out that sneezing and laughing in films is more profitable . . . "Boy of the Streets" opens tonight at the Mount Vernon Open Air Theater to continue for the remainder of the week . . . The Hilltop Theater of Ellicott City, Md., will stage "Phantom Footsteps" . . . a couple of interesting firsts . . . for the first time in her screen career Constance Bennett wears a bathing suit in "Topper Takes a Trip" . . . and Carole Lombard this week started her first straight dramatic role in years in David O. Selznick's "Made For Each Other," in which she is costarred with James Stewart . . . things, they say, run in threes, so 'most any minute you'll be reading that Garbo trucks in her next film.

as King Louis XVI in "Marie Antoinette." Many discriminating moviegoers who have seen this long-awaited attraction, starring Norma Shearer and which opens tomorrow at Loew's Palace, believe the Louis role is the most difficult in the picture. Morley's resemblance to Charles Laughton will not pass unnoticed.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, September 7.

MAYOR LA GUARDIA: If you succeed in transferring Newark Airport's business to New York, Mayor Ellenstein of Newark will seek reprisal by placing ads in the New York papers—inviting New York business concerns to move to Newark, pointing out less taxation, etc. . . . Jimmy Hines: Paul Coulcher and the other defendants Dewey convicted in the restaurant-union racket have been brought here from Sing Sing. They're being harbored in the Bronx, with Coulcher separated from the rest . . . James Roosevelt: The Sat. Eve. Post editors, who received Alva Johnston's rebuttal to your reply, still aren't sure whether they'll publish it.

GOV. MERRIAM: The San Francisco Fair just refused the application of the State of Florida to rent space there, because of the type of exhibit proposed by the Floridians. . . . The exhibit was to be in the form of a huge orange-squeezing machine. The orange juice was to be distributed, free of charge, to all persons. The officials didn't mind that so much. What they objected to was the inscription on the glasses: "Remember, Florida oranges give twice as much juice as California's."

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 7.—On the set the other day a lot of Boy Scouts had to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner." They started merrily: "Oh, say can you see by the dawn's early light . . ." then got stuck. The assistant director yelled: "Come on, finish it!" They said: "We will if you'll sing the rest for us." He couldn't, nor could anybody else. They waited an hour while lyrics were located.

HEDDA HOPPER

When that law is passed making it compulsory for a child to salute the flag, they should also be compelled to learn "The Star-Spangled Banner." I don't know it, do you?

At Horace McCoy's birthday party a friend brought along another Hollywood blonde who wouldn't go home until they had made her a special sandwich so she could take it home and press it between the leaves of a book. Horace's parting shot was: "I'll bet you don't own a book."

Olympe Bradna, who's longed to be an adult, has just made it, having passed her eighteenth birthday. Now wishes she hadn't. She worked until 3 a. m. the other night, something no child is allowed to do.

They're wissing Ellen Drew up a bit. At sneak previews of "If I Were King," she rushed over to Frank Lloyd, threw her arms around him and said: "It was wonderful!" Instead of waiting for him to congratulate her.

Love comes high for Russell Hayden, who has such a crush on June Clayton. He spent half his week's salary on telephone calls when on location for "The Frontiersman." Ain't love wonderful!

Joy Hodges, just back from playing with George M. Cohan, says: "No wonder everybody loves movies. You have a hairdresser, make-up artist, studio maid—furnished free. On the stage, you do your own buttoning up, or pay for it.

A tip to European maidens. Jack Oakie is on the loose. Will be in St. Moritz for Christmas and Monte Carlo for New Year's.

Frances Mercer, who tried to teach the Yam—the new Fred Astaire routine—to a lot of people down at Del Mar, fell, and her hip looks like an Italian sunset.

Lucille Ball and her mother started motoring to New York. What do you bet she'll be yanked back before she gets there?

Chester Morris, who made three attempts at personal appearance tours, has had to cancel his latest one in Philadelphia to come for RKO's "Pacific Liner." Wish somebody would give him a good one.

Cary Grant had a wonderful time at Lone Pine riding an elephant. He swears it had rhythm. Company discovered a night club nearby. But performers never had a chance to show what they could do. The movie actors took it over.

Lou Landers has given Mary Joe Desmond a job in his new picture. Her father, Bill, was terribly nice to him when he was an assistant director.

Funny what comes out of Hollywood when the heat's on. Silliest rumors I've heard in a long time are the Bette Davis and Bob Montgomery separations. A couple of years ago the rumor mongers had Bob practically divorced. And the people who did it weren't at all chagrined when they discovered he'd been beaning his sister-in-law. However, I guess Mary Pickford was right when she said: "What does it matter what they print about you as long as they spell your name right?"

Understand Errol Flynn has given the finest performance of his career under Eddie Goulding's direction in "Dawn Patrol." And Eddie used to be known as a woman's director. He is, too. Next will be children.

True Hollywood Starlet Found in 'Youth Takes Fling'

She broke into the movies without leaving her home town!

Her name is Virginia Grey! Her home town is Hollywood!

Virginia's mother was a film editor. Her father, Ray Grey, was a well known screen director. Her parents are no longer alive, but Virginia represents the second generation of her family engaged in motion pictures.

"I got my first screen role right here at Universal," the actress explained to Archie Mayo who is directing her with Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Frank Jenks and Dorothea Kent in "Youth Take a Fling."

"I was about eight years old. Walking across the Universal lot one day to see Dad, another director stopped me. He offered me the role of Little Eva in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' Father said it was okay, and I did the part. Joe Pasternak was a second assistant director on the picture."

Virginia is finding many of the same technical men at Universal who worked on her first picture.

Joe Pasternak is there too. But he is no longer an assistant director. Having discovered Deanna Durbin, and responsible for all of the little singer's great screen hits, he is today considered one of Hollywood's foremost film producers.

'Marie' Claims First Attention On Week's List

Headline-Inspired Film at Earle; Capitol Boasts World Premiere.

(Opening tomorrow unless specified.)

LOEW'S PALACE—"Marie Antoinette," starring Norma Shearer, supported by Tyrone Power, John Barrymore, Robert Morley, Anita Louise, Joseph Schildkraut, Gladys George, Henry Stephenson and a huge cast. A dramatic tale, lavishly picturized by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, of King Louis XVI, his Queen, and their epochal times. A road show attraction at popular prices. W. S. Van Dyke 2d, was the director. Principal supplements are Robert Benchley's "Courtship of a Newt" and a Pete Smith short in which Max Baer appears.

WARNER BROTHERS EARLE—"Racket Busters" on the screen, Chester Morris headlining the vaudeville bill. The former is based on New York Prosecutor Thomas Dewey's successful campaign against rackets. Walter Abel, his film prototype, even looks like the original. Humphrey Bogart, George Brent, Gloria Dickson and Allen Jenkins have the other leads. The stage show includes, besides Mr. Morris, the dance team of Mario and Floria; Sara Ann McCabe, singer; the Sinclair Sisters in "Broadway Rhythm" and Vic Hyde, called the "one-man swing band."

LOEW'S CAPITOL—"Hold That Co-Ed" on the screen, in world premiere; Richard "Red" Skelton headlining the vaudeville. John Barrymore is a wacky Governor, running for the Senate, in the film feature, whose other luminaries include George Murphy, Marjorie Weaver, Joan Davis and George Barbier. Murphy dances in the musical interpolations. Politics and football amazingly blended. In addition to Mr. Skelton's doughnut didoes, the stage portion has Britt Woods, who plays upon the mouth organ and his audience's risibilities. Ann Lester, singer; Grace and Ray McDonald, lately of Babes in Arms;" Earlyne Wallace, dancer, and the 16 Rockettes.

WARNER BROTHERS' METROPOLITAN—"Army Girl," a story about comings and goings at an Army post, featuring Madge Evans, Preston Foster, H. B. Warner, Jimmy Gleason, Heather Angel, Ralph Morgan, Neil Hamilton and others.

RKO-KEITH'S—"Carefree," newest and, according to some, greatest episode in the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers series of dancing, singing comedies. Music by Irving Berlin, direction by Mark Sandrich. Luella Gear, Ralph Bellamy, Jack Carson and Clarence Kolb head the supporting cast. Third week opened yesterday, with Donald Duck's "Good Scouts" being held over along with the feature.

LITTLE—"The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel," sequel to Leslie Howard's "The Scarlet Pimpernel," of a few seasons ago. Barry Barnes and Sophie Stewart play leading roles in this Alexander Korda production scheduled to open Sunday in the wake of "Mayerling."

LOEW'S COLUMBIA—"The Texans," presenting Joan Bennett as a tidy Southern belle; Randolph Scott, as a handsome officer in the Confederate Army, and May Robson, in another of her beloved character roles. Second week on F street.

TRANS-LUX — Newsreels, comedies and selected short subjects, the whole lasting about an hour and a quarter. War preparations in Europe, the President's "purge excursion" into Maryland, a travelog entitled "The Master Drink," "Mickey's Trailer" and an astrological novelty called "Thank Your Lucky Star" are on the menu.

ROADSIDE THEATER—"Eugene Aram," a revival of the old melodrama by W. T. Moncrieff, as interpreted by the Roadside barn players on Rockville pike. Performances nightly at 8:45. Second week opens Monday.

MOUNT VERNON OPEN-AIR THEATER—"Boy of the Streets," with Jackie Cooper and Maureen O'Connor. Two performances nightly. Opens today, continuing for remainder of the week.

GLEN ECHO PARK—Last few days to dance to little Joe Hart's music in the Spanish Garden ballroom, swim in the Crystal Pool and indulge in the various rides and amusements. Closes for season at midnight Sunday.

Germans Protest Russian Seizure Of White Sea Boat

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Sept. 7.—The German government revealed tonight that it lodged a protest with Soviet Russia because of a "recent incident" in Barnets Bay (part of the White Sea) where a German trawler Bahrenfeld was brought in by a Soviet patrol boat.

This, the Germans allege, happened outside the grounds of Soviet Russian sovereignty. The Germans asked Moscow for immediate release of the Bahrenfeld. Although the Soviet authorities promised quick investigation of the case, the Bahrenfeld has not yet been released, the official German news agency reported.

Witness Turns Against Dewey As State Rests in Hines Case

Hines

vious prosecution testimony that he had sent a check for $500 to Rose Wendorff, "Dixie" Davis' sister—the check she said she got from him and gave to Hines in the offices of Joseph Shalleck, defense counsel.

Furthermore, he said, he examined the check, as he did all checks from the account he carried in the name of Harry Albert, his lawyer friend, when it came back from the bank after being cashed. He swore it had no indorsement of "J. Hines" on it that time, as it did when it turned up in evidence at the trial. He stood up stoutly against a savage cross-examination by Dewey, insisting again and again that there was no such indorsement on that piece of paper when last he saw it, and denying questions that were practically open charges that he had conspired with the defense and received payment from the defendant.

Dodge Manager on Stand.

Faced with that situation, Dewey rushed two witnesses to the stand from the State department of finance, in charge of the investigation of frauds, and Herbert Granoff, chief field examiner in the department of investigations. Both testified the indorsement of Hines was upon the check when it came to the department in a bundle of papers from Bernard in May, 1938. They added that the income tax returns of both Bernard and Albert were being investigated at the time.

The high spot of the morning testimony was that of Henry Sobel, an insurance broker, who was campaign manager for Hines' candidate, William C. Dodge, when he was elected district attorney in 1933.

Curry Gave Him Charge.

Sobel said he was made campaign manager by John F. Curry, then leader of Tammany Hall, although he "never had met Judge Dodge." Appeals were sent out for contributions to the campaign, he said, but they lagged, so he consulted Curry and was told Hines would get him the necessary money. He went to see Hines at Shalleck's office twice, he said, and after a wait each time of a half hour or more received packages of currency. There was $2,500 in the first package, all in large bills. As he recalled it, there were three bills of $500 each, and one of $1,000. The second time, he said, he got $1,500 in small bills.

Later contributions brought the total up to $11,000, he testified. He placed the time of these contributions of cash by Hines as in October and early November, 1933, or about the same time that George Weinberg, "Big Harry" Schoenhaus, and "Dixie" Davis have testified the gang was providing cash for the Dodge campaign in amounts totaling $30,000.

As an extra fillip to his case at the wind-up, Dewey introduced through the testimony of a former accountant in Bernard's office, Frank Supnick, a cash book and a "general ledger and journal" telling of operations in the Marcial Flores Policy Bank in 1934.

Day-to-Day Record.

The books contained a day-to-day record of the operations of that bank, the witness said, as taken from "the sheets" provided him by Bernard. Though the first book was admitted in evidence only after strenuous objections by Stryker, the ledger telling of expenses charged against the bank was admitted without objection.

Neither Casey nor Murray was on the stand more than 10 minutes. Casey, who said he had been chief of the Troy (N. Y.) Fire Department for the last 20 years, chairman of the Rensselaer County Democratic committee, and an acquaintance of Hines for 14 to 15 years, mounted the stand at 5:55 p. m.

He said that in November or December, 1934, when Schultz was up-State fighting Federal charges of violating the income tax laws, Schultz's counsel, James Noonan, of Albany, N. Y., and "Dixie" Davis came to him to ask him whether he could help in getting a bondsman. Before they came, he said, he received a telephone call from Hines in New York, saying "a couple of fellows" would be around.

Couldn't Help Them.

He said he was unable to help them and they left. Later, he said, Schultz himself came to see him with two young lawyers named Madden and Doherty. They told him, he testified, they wanted to know if he could not do something to stop the police from interfering with Schultz. He said he could not. Shortly thereafter, however, Hines phoned him from New York and complained that the authorities in his county were "giving the fellows the run-around," and asked him if he could not do anything.

Asked by him "what fellows," Hines said, "the Dutchman," the witness testified. He said he told Hines he did not know how much he could do, but if "the fellows were all right and behaved themselves," he did not believe anyone would interfere with them.

Stryker asked the witness only one question, whether it was not the fact at the time that the authorities in his country were not permitting "Dixie" Davis to defend his client there, and Casey said that was not the case. Was not the question, Dewey asked, oratorically, one of stopping the police from "pushing Dutch around." The answer was, "Yes, sir." Stryker let the witness go.

Murray explained that he got into the discussion with Hines and "Dixie" about Dewey because he had been retained by Davis to try some civil cases.

Witness Hostile.

He said that when he left Davis's office to go to his home in Rockville, Center, Long Island, after work on some papers there, "Dixie" offered to drive him home in his automobile. Miss Dare and George Weinberg, neither of whom he had seen before, were in the automobile, he said. Stryker let the witness go without cross-examination.

The day's surprise was the testimony of Milton Bernard, whom Dewey was forced to place upon the stand, as a hostile witness, when testimony concerning the policy gang's accounts from Frank Supnick, the accountant in Bernard's office, could not be introduced legally without a foundation being laid by the man who gave Supnick "work sheets" and orders.

Bernard fought the prosecutor from the outset, demanding the records which had been taken from him on subpena by the district attorney's office a year ago before he would testify to the years in which he made up income-tax returns for the mobsters. Skimming through these records, he admitted readily that among his clients was the partnership of Alexander Pompez, policy banker, and George Weinberg, gangster, in 1933, 1934, and the early part of 1935.

tion from the Czechs—to fight for their independence and integrity.

Jan Masaryk, the Czech Minister in London, is expected to visit the foreign office tomorrow and to raise this question in serious terms.

Soon after the storm burst today it became known that Prime Minister Chamberlain had cut short his vacation in Scotland in order to return to London by the night train. He is due here tomorrow morning and will consult immediately with Lord Halifax. Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, interrupted his vacation at St. Andrews, also to return by the night train.

Scheme Discussed Before.

Despite the government's repudiation of the Times' editorial, suspicion persisted in informed quarters that the idea of divorcing the Sudeten German minority from the Prague government by pushing Germany's frontier eastward, had not been dropped in Whitehall. In May this scheme was known to have been under discussion in Downing street. The reference to it in a London dispatch printed in the New York Herald Tribune on May 15 has never been denied by Chamberlain. It was brought to his attention in the House of Commons in June, but he refused to comment.

Lord Beaverbrook's conservative "Evening Standard" advanced the idea of frontier revision in an editorial tonight. Mentioning the possibility that the Czech government's latest offer might be rejected, the paper said:

"In these circumstances Dr. Eduard Benes will doubtless be asked—if he has not already been asked—by London and Paris to consider whether he might not be well advised to agree to redraw the frontier and allow the Sudeten districts, where German-speaking Bohemians are thickest, to be included in Germany.

"That solution, it might be argued, would be better than having to deal with an irreconcilably rebellious 'state within a state.'"

The diplomatic corespondent of "The Daily Mail" will report tomorrow that inner circles in the British government have been discussing such a plan for some time, with the idea that the British government shoud advocate it in case of a new deadlock in the negotiations.

New Czech Bid Approved.

"There has, however, been no full cabinet discussion," The Daily Mail will say, "nor does the view held by some ministers represent a government decision."

Meanwhile, the British gave their blessing today to "Plan No. 4," the latest concessions offered by the Czechs. A summary of the new proposals reached the foreign office this morning and was studied by Lord Halifax and his advisers. Spokesmen said the proposals "do appear in the official view to represent a basis upon which future negotiations between the parties might well be conducted." The hope was expressed that both sides would be able to come together for an examination of the new scheme "in a spirit of mutual good will."

The British said much the same about Plan No. 3 last week. When it was tossed on the scrap heap, Whitehall backed out by saying that the scheme had appeared "vague and confusing" upon closer examination.

The suggestion of frontier revision now comes to the fore again and the government's denial of the Times' editorial has not served to kill mention of it.

Czech Nazis Halt Peace Talks After Sudeten Deputy Is Beaten

Czech

tions. They wanted to know whether, after this incident was settled, another would rise up to take its place.

The incident occurred at Moravaka Ostrava (in German, Maehrisch-Ostrau), a city of 110,000 people, mostly Czechs, 7 miles from the German-Polish-Czech frontier.

At 10:30 a. m. today a crowd gathered outside a courtroom where 82 Nazis were being held on charges of smuggling arms into the country. In the crowd were four Nazi members of Parliament.

Mounted police tried to clear them from the courthouse square, and the M. P.'s began to wave their indentity cards. From here on the stories differ.

The police say a man grabbed the reins of one of their horses, that the animal reared, and that the mounted officer swung his whip, accidentally striking the man.

The Sudeten German Party says the police charged the crowd, that Franz Mai, a Nazi member of Parliament, was struck with a whip, and that Dr. Fritz Koellner, another M. P., was thrown against a wall of a building.

Nazis See Runciman.

Early this afternoon the Nazi Party's negotiators were in their Prague headquarters, studying the government's latest offer, for a compromise, when they heard what had happened. Hastily they drew up a communique which said that just when they were about to accept the offer as a basis for negotiation, they had heard of the incident, and that it was useless to negotiate if such things could happen.

At 5 o'clock, headed by their "Deputy Fuehrer," Karl Hermann Frank, they went to the Alcron Hotel and protested to the British Mediation Mission headed by Viscount Runciman.

Hodza Pledges Inquiry.

At 7 p. m. they saw Premier Hodza and protested again. Hodza said the case was already being investigated and that if the police were at fault they would be punished. He promised to tell the Nazis tomorrow morning what steps had been taken to prevent a repetition.

It was difficult to tell tonight just how far the Nazis intended to go with the incident, and whether, after it was settled, another would be found to delay negotiations even further.

The answers to these questions mean a great deal to President Benes and Premier Hodza because opposition among the Czech people to the latest offer is growing steadily. In government circles it is asserted that the offer was practically forced on Benes and Hodza by the British government. The story is that they had to fight to have it approved by the cabinet, and that now the cabinet members are being subjected to criticism by their respective political parties.

Newspapers are being flooded with queries from all over the country, but the government still refuses to permit its proposals to be published in the Czech press. The offer is, however, being talked about in the cafes, and the feeling is mounting that something is happening which in time will cripple the state.

The details of the plan, which have been distributed to the foreign press, anger most of the Czechs who hear of them. They want to know whether, after the Germans have been given three autonomous districts with local police and control and of local officials, the nation will ever be able to mobilize its army with the speed and effectiveness it showed on May 21.

"Now what do you think of our British friends?" asked one Czech newspaper editor after he had read the proposals. "I guess we should have fought on May 21."

But while the Czechs were thinking they had given too much, the Nazis showed no signs of joy. Their communique today said that although they were willing to negotiate on the basis of the government's proposals, they were willing to negotiate only with a view to obtaining all their original demands.

In The Best Tradition.

By his appointment of Robert E. Freer to a seven-year term on the Federal Trade Commission President Roosevelt has followed the best civil-service tradition.

Although he was originally appointed to the FTC in 1935, and has been renamed as a Republican member, Mr. Freer is a career man in the Government service. He was formerly an attorney for the Interstate Commerce Commission. The expert caliber of his work was especially impressed upon members of Congress when he was detailed to work with the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. Apparently his grasp of the country's industrial problems in this capacity led to his promotion to the FTC.

In filling vacancies in the bi-partisan commissions Presidents have been known to select incompetents to represent the minority party. That practice may be very costly in terms of administrative efficiency. On the other hand, politicians are sometimes awarded jobs of this sort with little regard for their qualifications. When the President selects minority commissioners because of their special training and aptitude for the position, therefore, his genuine interest in service to the public is demonstrated.

Commissions of this sort have been made bi-partisan by Congress, not because their activities should be in any sense political, but to keep them free from prejudice. That, however, is only a first step toward effective administration of the complicated statutes which these agencies are called upon to enforce. Success really depends upon the expert knowledge and the administrative ability of the commission members.

When the bi-partisan character of a commission is overshadowed by the professional standing of its members there is a close approach to the ideal situation for agencies of this sort.

How The Yardstick Works.

The executives of the privately owned utility systems in certain of the areas served by subsidized governmental power projects have ceased to fight against invasion of their domain by a superior competitive force.

Their efforts are now mainly directed toward securing from the Government a fair price for properties which they cannot operate in competition with so-called yardstick agencies. The question which now presents itself is what should be considered a suitable unit for sale to the Government and what constitutes a fair sale price.

Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern, reports that he and Director Lilienthal of the TVA have come to an agreement on all points regarding the sale of Tennessee properties belonging to his company except that of price. He suggests, therefore, that the SEC act as arbitrator in this dispute—a seemingly fair proposal, since Mr. Lilienthal, being the representative of the sole purchaser and also in a position to dictate terms, can hardly be regarded as the best judge of the terms of sale.

Following the leadership of the companies in the TVA area another large private distributor of power—the Texas Power & Light Co.—has offered a block of its properties to the Colorado River Authority. It is alleged that agents for the PWA have been urging municipalities to borrow funds for the purpose of constructing duplicate facilities in certain Texas counties served by this company.

If municipalities desire to substitute public for private ownership of their local utilities certainly no obstacles should be placed in their way. But it would be wasteful and conducive to destructive competition and not in the interest of consumers to duplicate existing plants that are giving adequate service. Moreover, as the Texas Power & Light Co. points out, the loss of business in certain communities would prevent the company from lowering the cost of its services elsewhere, as it might if in possession of a fully integrated system.

That these arguments are offered in good faith is shown by the evidently sincere wish of the private companies to dispose of their properties if their facilities are to be sporadically duplicated with the aid of Federal funds that permit publicly owned concerns to subsidize power consumers. There is no doubt that the yardstick method is producing tangible results. But they are not the ones that were foreseen by those who originally urged it while under the delusion that Government competition would merely spur privately owned companies to increase their efficiency and lower their rates.

German Self-Sufficiency.

"The idea of blockading Germany," said Chancellor Hitler in his speech to the National Socialist Party congress at Nuremberg, "can even now be buried as an entirely ineffective weapon." It was the statement which above all others the German people wished to hear. And on whether or not it is a true statement a great deal depends.

If Germany is "without food worries for years to come;" if the German economy is really being reconstructed "so that at any time it can be completely independent from other countries;" if the Reich's only "real economic troubles" are the shortage of skilled and agricultural labor—if all these statements by Hitler are true, then is the strength of Germany today really enormous and the struggle of Czechoslovakia to preserve its national identity is probably doomed to failure.

There is undoubtedly a substantial basis for the Fuehrer's claims. The second Four-Year Plan, now approaching the end of its second year, has under the dynamic leadership of Gen. Goering already achieved many of its original objectives. German science, technological ability, industry and discipline have made the country, particularly since the inclusion of Austria, in several vital respects more nearly self-supporting than it was in 1914.

In that year Germany produced practically no gasoline, yet now she can supply 75 per cent of her normal requirements in that fuel. In 1914 all German rubber was imported, yet now 20 per cent of the domestic consumption is manufactured synthetically within the Reich. In 1914 Germany was completely dependent upon imports for her supplies of cotton. Now this, and other textile fibers, are being literally manufactured at home on a commercial scale.

The Four-Year Plan is largely based on transformation of coal and wood by chemical processes into products not naturally available in Germany. And what the Germans under Nazi rule have accomplished in this field must always be a monument to the inventive powers, the resources and the energy of a great people. The accomplishment, however, is as yet more notable for its technical than for its economic success. While many heretofore imported commodities can now be successfully manufactured in Germany, while the Germans now make soap from coal and clothing from beechwood, the manufacture remains in many lines experimental, costly and far from adequate to national needs.

Progress is being made. It has been assisted by the addition of Austria's considerable mineral wealth; her large reserves of timber; and above all by the inexhaustible reserves of cheap hydroelectric power provided by the former republic. But none knows better than Hitler himself that Greater Germany is still far from being self-sufficient, would still be desperately menaced by the blockade which he attempts to dismiss as "an entirely ineffective weapon."

That dependence on the outside world, which Germany within her present borders has not achieved, and probably cannot obtain, remains Europe's most effective guarantee of peace. As long as the British threaten a blockade of Germany Hitler will bluff, but beyond a certain point is unlikely to attempt military coercion. Neither the French nor Russian armies alone will restrain him. The United States he probably does not even regard as a factor in his plans. But the British Home Fleet, which this week steamed into the North Sea for two months of active maneuvering, must be constantly in Nazi calculations.

As long as the guns of that fleet are turned toward Germany the Fuehrer will walk warily. But they are the one factor, as is indicated by the way his mind dwells on the possibility of blockade, which really interferes with the advent of a German Mitteleuropa. With that goal achieved Nazi self-sufficiency would really be what Hitler wishes were the case today.

Not One Repudiated.

Senator McCarran's runaway victory in Nevada recalls a dramatic incident of July 10, 1937. In a fiery speech on the Senate floor Mr. McCarran volunteered to serve in first place in the "Battalion of Death" fighting to kill the compromise bill for reorganization of the Supreme Court. Because of the threats of Postmaster General Farley against him he assumed that his address that day might be his valedictory in the Senate. Yet he pledged his political life to the cause of an independent judiciary.

Instead of punishing him for that courageous act, the Democrats of Nevada have renominated Senator McCarran by an overwhelming majority. It is true that the President made no active effort to "purge" the Nevadan. But his standing in the Democratic Party had been very emphatically questioned during the court fight.

It was Senator McCarran who made the "purge" an active issue. "I do not think the hour has come," he told the Senate more than a year ago, when it can be said that "Because you exercise the judgment God Almighty gave you, therefore you are to be read out of the Democratic Party." Even at that early date he defied the Administration to oust him for voting in accord with his own convictions. And that course, as in various other cases, seems to have notably enhanced the Senator's prestige among his constituents.

The States in which President Roosevelt has concentrated his elimination campaign have not yet held their primaries. Nevertheless, it is interesting to note that not a single Senator who took a stand against the court bill has yet been defeated at the polls. Eight Senators who helped to preserve the independence of the courts have been renominated.

Senators who were willing to let the President remake the Supreme Court have not fared so well. In this category also eight have been renominated. But three have been eliminated in the primaries. It is impossible to argue that Senators Dieterich, Pope and McAdoo might have avoided defeat by standing out against the court bill. But the fact remains that the only Senators to be repudiated are three who were listed as favorable to the court-packing plan.

Politics And Pensions.

If Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio had had an adequate defense against charges of political abuse and inefficient administration of the State's old-age assistance plan, he should have welcomed the inquiry instituted by the Social Security Board. Instead, he assumes that the board is invading the rights of Ohio in presuming to attach conditions to the disposition of funds contributed by the Federal Government to support the indigent aged.

In response to serious charges of violation of State civil service laws and political intimidation of the pensioned during the recent primary contest the Governor retaliates by offering irrelevant criticisms of the political machinations of other Federal agencies operating within the State.

The course marked out for the Social Security Board is clear. It is imperative to insist upon efficient, nonpolitical administration of the old-age assistance system of the State as a condition of continued Federal support. To condone practices that dissipate or divert Federal funds intended to supplement pensions for destitute old people would make the board a party to the most despicable sort of political oppression of the helpless.

Twice before the board has intervened successfully to force reforms of old-age assistance programs in States where local administrations had failed to meet reasonable tests of honesty and efficiency. In Illinois Federal relief contributions were suspended temporarily to force compliance with the provisions of the State and Federal laws. Gov. Horner complained loudly that the action was tyrannical and subversive of the rights of a sovereign Commonwealth.

But in the end both Illinois and Oklahoma found it possible to institute required reforms within a brief period of time and nothing has since been heard about their sovereign right to misappropriate Federal funds that they are not forced to accept if they dislike the conditions attached to the grants. In the future the old people of these and all other States that pad pension rolls or permit inefficient employes to handle funds will be much better off for Federal intervention.

The Ohio situation differs superficially from that which developed in Illinois and Oklahoma because of the complications introduced by the heated primary contest in which the support of the pensioned was sought by Gov. Davey. However, the difficulties in Ohio are of long standing and the fact that political abuses became especially flagrant during the recent primary campaign simply strengthens the indictment against that State's old-age pension system.

Because Federal funds controlled by other agencies have been used to buy political support, as Gov. Davey alleges, it does not follow that the Social Security Board should tolerate misuse of the funds for which it is responsible. It is, indeed, encouraging to know that this particular governmental agency is eager to discover and suppress irregularities wherever it finds them. If left unchecked such abuses as have been uncovered in Ohio would eventually completely destroy the protective value of public pension systems.

Pollyanna to the contrary notwithstanding, you can't keep your chin up while bowing to the inevitable.

Those Hats.

From the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

A credit is due to the women's wear trade which makes it a custom to introduce winter hat styles in midsummer. That seemingly irrational practice does something to take the dog out of the hot days. The fashion world credits Paris designers with this year's amazing doll hats, but that doesn't sit altogether right. We prefer to think it was some bright New Yorker who had the ludicrous idea that was to drive millions of young women into July ecstasies.

Those who sit next to the fashion throne have decided the new gear is capricious, changeable, undependable, that it may be poised, shaped and worn in any number of ways so long as it stays within the doll size. And they bemoan what it does to the standard toques, tricorns and pill boxes, which is merely warning that the yesterday's versions are strictly old hats. All are told frankly that there is some fussy business connected with the miniatures. At least part of the hair must be combed up and a large bag is required to offset the scanty headdress.

As usual with extreme fashion setting versions in early season, the doll hats are not brought out at popular prices. Fashion commentators admit they are not to be worn as hats but as decorations—like flowers or jewels. Economically their status is like that of the extra radio in the bedroom, and most women will settle their problem with modified versions later in the season. That is the usual thing. But all should be grateful for the doll hat. We have had our divertissement and the fashion promoters have gotten across a resounding message that the new season is here.

Unemployment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post, in its recent editorial, "Population, Unemployment," gets at the heart of the unemployment problem when it says, "New enterprises must constantly be developed and old ones extended in order to provide means of livelihood for oncoming generations."

Down through history people have feared the coming of the machine and have blamed it for unemployment. The machine has been maligned. Actually the machine has increased employment—though of a different kind—because it raises the standard of living.

If one may venture further opinion on so involved a question as unemployment it seems to me that it has four causes: 1, unemployableness, or subnormality; 2, distribution problems; 3, greed of the few; 4, lack of vision to birth and promote new and practical ideas that require employment to externalize. The last two named represent the spiritual and vital side of the issue, No. 3 being the negative and No. 4 the positive phase. The mechanization of labor really touches the problem only on the second count—distribution—in this case, distribution of labor, and this only temporarily. It would seem that the proper aid to the distribution of labor would be to shorten hours to match the labor saving of the machine.

For people to admit themselves the victims of their own brain children is both humiliating and illogical. But we are ever the victims of mass fear and sterile minds. A world lies at our door waiting to be relieved of suffering and to be made beautiful. To those who can "see," unemployment seems but a figment of the imagination.

Mexican Lands.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial comments in The Post of September 3 on the Mexican attitude are sound and justified, but exception must be taken to this statement: "The conception of communal ownership is difficult for northern minds to appreciate." Had you used the word "modern" instead of "northern," I should let that assertion pass.

Although ownership of land in fee simple is of great antiquity, the common lands of Anglo-Saxon days and even down to fairly recent times were firmly imbedded in the English system of land tenure. Feudalism, which grew out of the vast estates of the latifundia system, was based on the inalienability of land as the common fund of all free men.

No one can quarrel with Mexico for declaring in what manner the land and subsoil within the republic shall be owned. However, to disavow any obligation to deal fairly in compensating either her own nationals or foreigners whose estates in land were held under valid titles, vitiates the power of the state whether derived from the common or civil law. Shipping Subsidies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have before me a clipping from The Post of recent date which says, concerning the difficulties of the Dollar Line due to withdrawal of Federal subsidies: "Transfer of Dollar Line securities will give Government 90 per cent control of the company."

Is not this reversal of the Administration's policy in regard to mail contracts which are really subsidies?

I refer you to the marine pages of the New York Journal of Commerce, also to minutes of Merchant Marine Committee of Congress. Former Senator Black was most vociferous in condemning subsidies in form of mail contracts.

I should like to see Mark Sullivan review this in your paper.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although not a fisherman, I read with a great deal of interest the articles written by Ackerman that appear daily in your paper.

Suggestion To Cardenas.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wouldn't presume to advise President Cardenas or his people on their agrarian problem, but my belief is that were there a law in each Mexican state requiring landholders to pay a tax approximating the annual rental value of their holding minus improvements, there'd be little left of the problem to chew over.

Such laws, strictly enforced, would leave little need for other taxes. They would be taking only community-made values for community use, and would involve no question of confiscation. It would not be long until the states would have ample lands, by forfeiture, for all who would put them to best use, as they would need to with taxes on a rental basis. Alien ownership on that basis, with speculators eliminated, would not be objectionable. Moreover, as to absentee landlordism, with the profits gone that part of the problem would liquidate itself without leaving ground for international complications in the case of aliens.

This suggestion is largely from observation of what the Canadian Northwest provinces did to loosen up the Hudson Bay Co.'s land monopoly and save themselves from other land exploiters, domestic and foreign. But the workout would be perhaps too complicated for Mexico. SIMPLE SIMON.

Shirley Temple Again.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Concerning Ex-Marine's denunciation of Quintus Lucius Pro Bono Publico (I know what it means:) Poor Ex-Marine! He missed the point of a good story. I'm sure that Quintus was not trying to make Bono Publico believe that Shirley Temple was usurping Leni Reifenstahl's enviable niche in Adolf's heart. And I dare say that most of us chuckled over a humorous story well-written, and didn't worry much about Vittorio Mussolini's fitting into the role of father to Shirley Temple's quins.

Let Ex-Marine be reminded that intelligent American people never get riled up about "poppycock propaganda" of this nature but choose to laugh it off. Let this retired Leatherneck remember that the best way of combating the thing he is afraid of (the big bad bear of Moscow) is to expose and ridicule its doings in this country. Would he outlaw Communism and see thousands flock to the Red banner in the name of Jefferson? Would he want to make martyrs of them instead of clowns?

Let us have more of Quintus' subtle humor and less of Ex-Marine's fuss-budgeting.

More Police.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note that Maj. Brown is asking 156 additional men and officers, 56 of them to man and equip a new precinct in the Northeast section of the city, the remainder to augment several of the precincts now far short in personnel.

I think I voice the sentiments of the vast majority of our citizens and property owners of the D. C. and adjoining suburbs under jurisdiction of the District government, in saying that the enactment of the portion of Maj. Brown's report dealing with the Northeast section and equipping of the new precinct is very badly needed. The territory in question has been uncovered by proper police protection for a long while. The District of Columbia Commissioners, the press, citizens of all types, sex and race, the various business and citizens associations and other civic groups should present a united front to Congress stressing the absolute need for the personnel and equipment of the new precinct as requested.

If this is done I believe success will result. HENRY F. ASH.

Our Foreign Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having returned from a voyage abroad, may I ask for the hospitality of your pages to put on record my admiration for the work of our diplomatic and consular representatives in Germany.

I am particularly referring to the Consulate General in Vienna, which I had occasion to visit a number of times in June and July. I cannot sufficiently express my admiration for the consular officials and their staff in handling ten thousands of persecuted destitutes, who sometimes stand in line for 12 hours merely to glance through an American telephone directory. The stress of work under such circumstances since March has, I am told, resulted in the nervous breakdown of two members of the staff.

It is my belief that the officials and their staff, by their earnest endeavor, sympathy and tolerance, are demonstrating democratic ideals through action, and are standard-bearers of Americanism in a wilderness of lies and scientific sadism.

Correspondent Corrected.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A Mr. Frank Coleman stated a few days ago in your paper that Benjamin Franklin was the author of the saying, "Let a man make a better mousetrap than his neighbor and the world will beat a pathway to his door." Ralph Waldo Emerson was the father of that sentence. Coleman also says that Roosevelt is a champion of Jefferson's principles. Wrong again. Jefferson wrote, "That country is best governed which is least governed"—a condition about as opposite to Roosevelt's policies as it is possible to imagine.

Taxicab Rates.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The inconsistency of the taxicab rates are a joke. If one crosses Florida avenue the fare is 30 cents, yet the fare from Twenty-second street northwest, to Eighth street northeast, is only 20 cents.

A flat rate of 25 cents to any part of Washington, with an additional charge of 5 cents for each extra passenger or piece of baggage and more outside the District Line, without tips, would be more consistent.

The monopoly held by one taxi concern at Union Station is unjust discrimination.

The Holmesburg Horror.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The death of the four convicts which occurred recently in Philadelphia is a challenge to this entire country and to the ministerial profession in particular. Surely no one who calls himself a Christian can refrain from raising his voice in protest against this brutal, merciless and cowardly attack; this regardless of what the prisoners had done.

The public awaits with interest the outcome of the so-called trial of this case. It is my guess that each person will shift the responsibility to the other. A. L. A.

Republican Opportunity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much ado is in the political air about F. D. R. invading Maryland to purge Senator Tydings of his anti-New-Dealism. Republicans will wisely but quietly welcome such intrusion, for nothing will be more in their favor than to nominate Lewis. Most of the Tydings or Jeffersonian Democrats will vote Republican, November 8. Not only that, it will be the beginning split for 1940. The sooner the better. PERRY F. SKINNER.

In Praise Of Spooks.

THE PASSING of the ghost story from the literary scene fills me with sadness. When the strange knocking in the attic, the clanking chains on the stairway, and the veiled lady who floats through the graveyard disappear from the printed page, they will take with them a quality which I for one shall sadly miss.

Novels whose central characters are invisible, mischief-making what-is-its seldom fall from the pens of modern writers. It's a rare thing to find a good, terrifying ghost story between the bright covers of the sleek magazines that adorn the newsstands nowadays. Occasionally we see Mickey Mouse or Donald Duck playing tag with a couple of coy, playful spooks at the local movie house, but even Mickey and Donald find little time to bother with the lonely denizens of the demi-world.

Have we become so rational and enlightened, so wrapped up in the problems of the living, that we simply aren't interested in the spirits of the dead nor in the least frightened by their possible return? Or are we being cheated by authors too unimaginative to write about "silly superstitions?"

After all, who can prove that ghosts are merely silly superstitions? In my own comparatively brief lifetime, I have met three seemingly intelligent, level-headed individuals who could tell of personal encounters with ghosts.

Mrs. Merritt, a gray-haired, placid wholesome-looking woman who lives in a small Tennessee town, is one of them. Shortly after her marriage, some 30 years ago, she and her young husband moved into a charming old house on a farm a few miles from town.

One evening about dusk she came in from out of doors and walked down the dimly lighted central hallway. As she neared the parlor door, she says, she saw a slender, stooped little woman, wearing a bonnet, standing with her hand on the door knob. Mrs. Merritt was quite surprised but thought perhaps it was someone who had called while she was out. She was about to speak when the old woman opened the door, walked into the parlor, and closed the door behind her.

Mrs. Merritt hurried after her, wondering why anyone should act so queerly. But inside the parlor she found no one. There were no doors through which she could have left, and all the windows were locked. Mrs. Merritt searched and searched, but she found no trace. She began to become frightened and, struggling for self-control, ran down the hall toward the cheerful lamplight of the dining room. The sight of her hearty, jovial husband standing behind his chair and the cook waddling in with fried chicken and hot biscuit made her feel a little foolish. She asked the cook if anyone had called. The cook said no.

Mrs. Merritt was afraid her husband would laugh at her, or perhaps think she was ill. So she said nothing to him about her experience in the hall.

The next day, as she was working in her garden, an old colored woman who had lived in the neighborhood for years passed down the lane nearby and stopped to speak to her. She was all dressed up and Mrs. Merritt asked her where she had been.

"I'se been to a funeral," she answered. "Old Mrs. Tomlinson that used to live in yo' house a long time ago died down in New Orleans and dey brought her back here to bury her."

"Tomlinson? Tomlinson? I never heard of her," said Mrs. Merritt slowly. "By the way, Sarah, what did she look like?"

"Oh, she war a little thin woman," said Sarah. "And, Mrs. Merritt, it's de funniest thing. Dey buried her in her bonnet."

A cousin of mine once lived in a Chicago apartment where invisible feet pattered down the hall every evening and stopped at the dining room door. He used to give dinner parties and entertain his company by letting them listen to his ghostly guest. Often he ran and flung open the door just as the footsteps reached it, feeling sure that this time he would see "it" face to face. But he never did, and was unable to obtain any explanation of the phenomenon. The footsteps finally got on his nerves so that he moved out.

At a friend's house not long ago I met a greatly excited girl who said she had seen a ghost the night before. She had been spending the night with a family who lived at Rock Castle, an ancient house in Tennessee, built by a Revolutionary War general who scandalized his neighbors by marrying an octoroon. Paying a visit to the attic to look at some antique furniture that was stored there, this girl said that by the flickering light of her candle she saw a woman dressed in white coming toward her. The woman came close enough before she disappeared for the girl to see her eyes. She says they were snapping brown eyes and she feels sure it was the spirit of the octoroon wife.

As long as such tales are told, who can say for certain that there are no ghosts, and why should authors cease to write about them? Must we be denied the delicious terror of waking at 2 a. m. to lie with muscles slowly congealing, listening to the creaking of the floor boards and the rattling of the shutters as the recollection of some eerie story read just before bedtime races through our brains? The 'Poor' Golfer

By Westbrook Pegler

Writers More Deserving of Sympathy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—One is tempted to agree with Gene Sarazen that the professional golfers are the most put-upon class of artists, for great are the impositions and wrongs which they suffer. They travel thousands of miles at much personal expense to play in great and secondary tournaments, knowing that they are bucking a brace game whose rewards are hardly comparable to the miserable pay-off handed down by the policy racketeers. The capital prize of the United States Open championship is only $1,000 and that of the British open £100, and there can be only one winner each year of each of these paltry tips, though hundreds of good men compete.

• • • •

MR. SARAZEN'S lament is further developed in the current Collier's—a sad story of a crying shame, but less pathetic, on the whole, than that of the ill-used hundreds of professional writers who buck ten chancy whims and tastes of the magazines. Here is a large class of more or less qualified performers who not only gamble their time and ability in a highly speculative field but often, when they have turned in first-class work representing diligent digging and fine skill, find their copy tossed back to be tinkered over to suit an editor's arbitrary formula or personal taste.

In fiction the leading magazines have adopted patterns as rigid as linoleum cuts, roughly comparable to those of the Hollywood trade. Boy and girl must be brought together or left in peril at certain intervals of the serial to mark the installment endings, regardless of the natural history development of the story at the hands of a skilled narrator.

SO BACK goes the writer to his desk to sweep aside his mounting bills and do it over. This means, of course, that the continuity, even the plot, must be twisted out of shape and rebuilt, one painful word after another, with no certainty that even when it has been changed to the editor's specifications he will not finally turn it down—just because.

Natural writing is almost impossible in the field of magazine fiction, what with taboos and house policies and the demand for text to be wrapped around the razor blades and heating systems in the rear of the book. One magazine of national circulation appealing to the country club trade actually bars copy dealing with the lower economic classes on the ground that those who read it do so in the mood of wealth and would be disenchanted by any hint that poverty exists. Such absurd but practical snobbery seems mean enough on its face, but is a little worse to writers who tempt this fastidious editorial taste for a maximum price of $200.

• • • •

EDITING is an inexact business at best, but it has been complicated by a terrifying jumble of changing and unpredictable house rules and forms and mere personal whims of men who have power to accept or reject copy representing months of work. Undistinguished editors whose absolute limit is $250 or as little as $150 assume the right to instruct skilled men and women to tear apart and rewrite, not once but repeatedly, fiction stories and presentations of fact or opinion, and to reject work in the end which, having now been done to their particular orders, is hopelessly unsalable anywhere else.

Writers of this unhappy class console themselves with the not very nourishing thought that editors are but thwarted writers in more or less human form. However true this thought might be, it buys no pork chops or shoes for the baby, nor does it mitigate the cruelty with which writers are kept dangling.

• • • •

MAGAZINE WRITING, except for a very few box office names, is a hay-chasing job, engaging many more earnest workers than professional golf. Like golf, it is almost wholly speculative, but, worse, the writer often is led by hopes and half promises to perform hard work, taking weeks of time, for which he receives no pay at all in the end.

In one of our most brilliant slick-paper publications the finished product is a reliable joy, but the casual customer sees nothing of the exactions, the waste of effort and the harsh disappointments which never even reach the hall box.

All that Mr. Sarazen says of golf is true, but there are excellent writers bucking the magazine trade who on reading this piece might be tempted to break out their clubs and try the tournaments. True, they might starve, but that would be no novelty, and golf does keep one out in the open air.

Walker Appointed Art Gallery Head

Appointment of John Walker, of Pittsburgh, as chief curator of the National Gallery of Art was announced yesterday by Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

Walker now is serving as associate in charge of fine arts at the American Academy in Rome. He is expected to begin his work here next summer.

European Showdown

By Europax.

The Horns Of The French Dilemma.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

AS THE CZECH CRISIS swiftly approaches a climax, France has begun to do some hard, fast thinking. Frenchmen today are facing facts, unpleasant, uncomfortable facts. For they realize that the decision of whether the world is to be plunged into war is likely to fall very soon on France's shoulders.

There must be no mistake about this: the decision of peace or war rests primarily on Adolf Hitler. With nearly a million and a half men mobilized for "totalitarian maneuvers," and with Germany in the grip of the mesmeric exaltation of the Nazi congress at Nuremburg, this point should be clear. Hitler alone will decide whether Germany is to march into Czechoslovakia, and if he makes that choice he must bear the blame for what follows.

But that does not alter the fact that France has her own dilemma to face, and that her answer to it is of vital importance. If an acceptable solution to the Czechoslovakian problem is not found without resort to force, then, if Hitler decides to make war on Czechoslovakia, the French government will have to decide whether that war is to become a general European—and probably a world—conflict.

• • • •

THIS IS particularly true because of the presence of Lord Runciman in Prague. What does his mission really mean? Stripped of deceptive appearances, does it not mean that England has thereby reserved for herself the possibility of judging, whether, in the event of a final breakdown of all efforts to find a peaceful compromise, the fault lies primarily with the Czech government or with the Sudetens—that is to say, in the last analysis, with Hitler?

If all of Lord Runciman's efforts to bring both sides together prove vain, and the British mediator's final report to his government places the blame for the resultant deadlock on Geamany, then the French will have less to worry about. They know that in such a case they can surely count on British support if they are obliged to go to the aid of Prague because of the French alliance with Czechoslovakia. And what is more, they know that Hitler, in the face of such a judgment by Lord Runciman, would hesitate to strike.

But the French are by no means certain of the outcome of Runciman's mission. There is, of course, still a possibility that a compromise project might be freely accepted by both the Czech government and the Sudeten German Party. But the prospect is admittedly dim and doubtful. This being so, the French are worried. Knowing that there is a powerful group in Britain which would prefer to see Czechoslovakia dismembered and reduced to a neutral state amounting in fact to a vassal of the Reich, rather than risk a war over the issue at present, many Frenchmen would not be surprised to find that Runciman's final report let the onus of failure rest at least in part on Prague.

• • • •

SHOULD THIS be the case—so runs the reasoning of the thinking Frenchmen today—France will be put on a very difficult spot. In the first place, such a judgment would be likely to encourage Hitler to intervene in support of the Sudeten Germans' claims, since he would have good reason to think that Britain was above all anxious to avoid being drawn into war over Czechoslovakia. In the second place, should Hitler act on his hunch, France would be faced with the grave question of whether to go to Czechoslovakia's aid despite the knowledge that British public opinion, influenced by a Runciman report unfavorable to the Czechs, might not support France or at least might not support her at once.

This business of going to the aid of the Czechs is no easy abstraction. Frenchmen at the moment are counting very realistically the cost of such a move. They know perfectly well that it would mean throwing themselves against a well-nigh impregnable "Siegfried Line"—the frontier fortifications which nearly half a million conscripted laborers have been rushing to completion in the last two months. They realize that the Italian frontier could not be left uncovered, and that the Pyrenees would have to be watched closely in the air, to say the least. In the end, the French feel certain of victory; but they are under no illusions as to the cost.

Is it any wonder, therefore, that many Frenchmen are asking themselves whether capitulation before Germany's expansionist aims in central Europe would not be the best course after all. Not that there is, on the part of thinking people in France, any nonsense about "fighting for Czechoslovakia." Most Frenchmen realize quite clearly that if France goes to the aid of Prague in case of a German invasion it will be at bottom a question of French security. It will be because the French general staff has said that France is in a better position to fight Germany while she still has Czechoslovakia and Soviet Russia as allies than she will later on when all the resources, if not the actual manpower, of Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Rumania—steel, wheat and petrol—are under German control.

• • • •

THERE IS LITTLE doubt in French eyes that this would be the effect of letting Hitler have his way with Czechoslovakia. Whether the country is completely partitioned, as some fear, or whether it is merely reduced to a neutral nonentity economically and diplomatically dominated by Germany, as appears more likely, the consequences would be to remove the last serious obstacle to German expansion and influence in central and eastern Europe.

But on the other hand, war is an indescribably terrible thing. Time gained, even at the cost of capitulation, could be utilized for strengthening the forces of peace. Perhaps economic or social upheavals from within will nullify the threat of war seemingly inherent in the totalitarian regimes, if they are given time—these are the arguments France is pondering, pro and con as central Europe approaches a showdown.

What the final decision will be is impossible to predict. Perhaps a peaceful compromise will make a decision unnecessary. Perhaps circumstances will take the decision out of the hands of France.

Today and Tomorrow

ment, that the Czechs are willing to redress all the express grievances of the German minority, and that for the sake of European peace they are willing to run the grave risk of disintegrating the Czechoslovak Republic.

They are offering to hand over the control of law and order in certain vital strategic frontier regions to a minority who are acting under the orders of the head of a foreign and profoundly hostile state.

• • • •

ONE CAN obtain some conception of the extent of the Czechs' concessions by supposing that we were agreeing to turn over control of the police in the Panama Canal Zone and in Hawaii to Japanese residents acting under orders from Tokyo. In fact, the concessions offered by the Czechs are even more dangerous than that. For the regions they are offering to turn over to the control of their enemies are nearer to their capital than Philadelphia is to Washington.

• • • •

TO THIS point the British have persuaded the Czechs to go. By this policy they are forcing the Czechs to take immeasurable risks for the future.

But they have achieved important results. They have confronted Hitler with an offer which a sensible man who wants peace will find it hard to reject. They have insured the Czechs the active, not merely the passive support of France, and they have provided themselves with a moral case which they can take to the British people if worst comes to worst.

A month ago British opinion was divided and uncertain as to whether the Czechs had a clear case. The case of the Czechs has now been cleansed and clarified to the point where Mr. Chamberlain could submit the case to the judgment of the British people with assurance as to what their verdict would be.

• • • •

THUS THE situation has changed in an important way since Sir John Simon's speech on August 27. At that time the British government could go no further than to predict that Britain would probably be drawn into a general war. It was possible then to question the prediction, because it could be argued there was inside the Chamberlain government an influential isolationist, anti-Czech, and even pro-German faction. But by driving the Czechs to extreme concessions, Lord Runciman has altered this situation in Great Britain. The clarification of the moral record means that the government would not merely, as Sir John Simon said, be entangled in a general war, but that it would have also an obligation of honor to intervene.

The supreme question of the hour is whether Hitler understands the British position and can be convinced that he cannot attack without provoking a European war. It would appear that the British have not yet been able to talk directly with Hitler. It is understood that the German foreign office, the regular German embassies in London and Paris, the German generals, and the German industrialists now realize clearly that the use of violence against Czechoslovakia will bring on a general war. They are counseling moderation. But it is also understood that Herr Ribbentrop and the irregular Nazi foreign service, and the radical party leaders inside Germany are telling him that the allies are bluffing and that his hour of destiny has come. The next few days will show whether British diplomacy can succeed in breaking through the Nazi war party to the mind of Hitler.

• • • •

ONE NEED not despair that they may succeed sufficiently to avert a show of violence and to prolong the diplomatic negotiations. It is of some significance that during these past two weeks the British have at least temporarily convinced Mussolini that a war in central Europe will be a general war. Two weeks ago, according to reliable accounts, the influence of Italy was engaged on the side of violent action. Mussolini seems to have believed that if Hitler attacked in Czechoslovakia, he could settle the Spanish affair and not have to deal with the British in the Mediterranean.

More recently Italy has been quiet and puzzled because, it appears, Mussolini has seen that in a general war he would certainly be chosen to receive the first full impact of the allied offensive. Mussolini may, of course, change again. But for the moment the British have persuaded him that everything is at stake. The hope of peace depends upon their persuading Hitler in the same fashion.

• • • •

IF THEY do, and if war is averted now the world will breathe more easily for a moment. But it must be said, however discouraging it may be, that unless there is a miracle, the condition of crisis will continue. The Czech offer might be the solution of the problem in a reasonably settled and law-abiding Europe. But given the fact of the Pan-German ambition under Nazi leadership, it is difficult to see how the Sudeten Germans can settle down to live loyally and peaceably in the Czechoslovak republic. It is equally difficult to see how they can be annexed to Germany without violence that would involve the whole of Europe.

So if there is no war now, there is nothing better in prospect than an atmosphere in which war is always possible, always near, and always capable of being provoked by an incident. At the best, Europe is condemned to live dangerously unless and until the aggregation of power on the side of peace is so great that no one can doubt its existence.

Vandenberg Flays Roosevelt Effort Against O'Connor

Chicago, Sept. 7.—In attempting to defeat Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, chairman of the House Rules Committee, President Roosevelt has adopted an effective strategy to gag the legislative branch of Government, Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said in an interview here today.

"American dictatorship, American style," is the President's objective, the Senator said, adding that it was President Roosevelt's scheme to establish the "American style" of dictatorship by packing the judicial and legislative branches of Government with yes men. If the President succeeds in retiring Representative O'Connor from the House, Vandenberg declared, the Representative's successor as chairman of the House Rules Committee would realize that the tenure of his job depended on his saying yes to the President.

Vandenberg disclosed that he intended to take the stump in behalf of Republican candidates in this fall's election campaign not only in his own State of Michigan, but in numerous other States.

Paredes to Leave Post Here to Seek Seat in Assembly

Quintin Paredes, Philippine resident commissioner in Washington, will give up his post to run for a seat in the Islands' national assembly, leaders of the Nacionalista Party announced yesterday in Manila, according to the Associated Press.

It was reported Paredes' decision followed a conference with Commonwealth President Quezon, who appointed him first commissioner in December, 1936.

The 54-year-old Filipino left Washington for the Islands two months ago. Father of ten children, Commissioner Paredes' career includes long service on the bar and bench. He was re-elected four times to the Philippines House of Representatives, and was a member of the National Assembly when named commissioner.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"Information, Please."

(An impression of the radio feature of that name.)

Mr. Fadiman — This question comes from Miss Hilda Lugg, of Wistaria Manor: What actress is always associated with the line, "That's all there is; there isn't any more?"

Mr. Kieran—It was either Keats or a Baltimore oriole.

Mr. Fadiman—You're just guessing again, Mr. Kieran.

Mr. Adams—I remember; it was in "The Mikado."

Mr. Fadiman—The program is stuck $5 again and it's getting pretty expensive. Here is one from Joseph Zopple, of Coscob, Conn.: What famous pitcher is so superstitious that he always shifts his umbrella from his right to his left arm before throwing a ball when the count is 3 and 2?

Mr. Kieran—Could it be the bobwhite or snipe?

Mr. Fadiman—You're dodging the question. I thought you were an expert on baseball as well as birds.

Mr. Kieran—Yes; but I'm weak on umbrellas.

• • • •

Guest—Don't I get a chance to answer any questions on the program?

Mr. Fadiman—With our trained hands muffing 'em like this, I'm afraid to take a chance with strangers. But I'll try you. What is your name?

Mr. Kieran—Bullfinch.

Mr. Fadiman—Will you please keep out of this. I am talking to this week's guest victim. I repeat the question: What is your name?

Guest—Who?

Mr. Adams—Whom, not who.

Mr. Kieran—It could be from "Twelfth Night" or it could be from the Audubon prints.

Mr. Fadiman—I ought to pay the $5 to eliminate the chaos. Once more I repeat that I am addressing tonight's guest, and again I ask him what his name is.

Guest—I give up!

• • • •

Mr. Fadiman—We haven't got a right answer tonight. Well, here is one: What is the difference between a trivet, a divot and a rivet?

Mr. Kieran—A trivet can only fly about 200 miles a day, but I often have made a divot fly 350 . . .

Mr. Adams—The difference between a trivet, a divot and a rivet is that a rivet was immortalized in song.

Mr. Fadiman—What song?

Guest—I know that one: "Old Man Rivet."

Mr. Adams—What chance has a "pro" on this program when they ring in these amateurs?

Mr. Fadiman—Now we have one from Lucious Quiggle, of San Mateo, Calif. The question is . . .

Mr. Kieran—The double-crested plover or Hindoo finch.

Mr. Fadiman—I haven't even framed my question, and you have an answer for it.

Mr. Kieran—In my business you have to look ahead.

Mr. Fadiman—What is your business?

Mr. Kieran—I'm an ornithologist.

'Yes Men' Insecure

By Mark Sullivan

F. D. R. Invites Defiance

WITH success of Senator McCarran in Nevada, 7 are now safe out of the 9 Democratic Senators who opposed Mr. Roosevelt's court measure. Five are already formally renominated—Gillette of Iowa, Clark of Missouri, Van Nuys of Indiana, Smith of South Carolina, and now McCarran.

Two more, Adams of Colorado and Lonergan of Connecticut, will be formally renominated next week by State conventions whose membership is already determined and overwhelmingly favorable to them. There remain but two chances for Mr. Roosevelt to punish opposition to his wishes—Mr. Tydings in Maryland, on Monday; Mr. George, in Georgia, next Wednesday.

On the record, even thus far, the effect is to make Democrats in Congress feel it is reasonably safe to vote their convictions against Mr. Roosevelt's demands. What flows from this? The effects will appear in the new Congress which assembles next January. The new Congress will have a Democratic majority—while the Democrats will lose some seats to the Republicans, they will still have a majority.

How will this Democratic majority feel about President Roosevelt?

• • • •

THEY WILL have seen the attempt to purge "no" Senators and will have seen that attempt fail, in part certainly, perhaps wholly. They will have seen more. They will have seen that to be a "yes" Congressman is no certain safety.

It may make a Congressman safe from Mr. Roosevelt, but not safe from the voters. The Democrats in the coming Congress will remember that such loyal "yes" Senators as Mr. McAdoo in California and Mr. Pope in Idaho were defeated by Democratic voters in primaries.

They will recall that the most extreme New Dealer in the House, Mr. Maverick of Texas—who spectacularly rushed to write his name at the bottom of the President's court bill and thus make it his own—was defeated by Democratic voters.

And by January, when the new Congress meets, it will have seen still more "yes" men pay the price of "yes-ness." For it is in the general election in November that the "yes" men will suffer most of their defeats. It was never likely that a large number of the "yes" men would fail in the Democratic primaries—the defeat of Messrs. McAdoo, Pope, Maverick and a few others was a surprise. The real judgment day for the "yes" men will be election day in November, when conservative Democratic voters will unite with Republicans to elect Republican candidates.

• • • •

THE DEMOCRATS in the new Congress will remember more. They have seen Mr. Roosevelt state, in effect, that he feels no binding obligation to support Democrats, as he demands that Democrats support him.

The most serious detriment to Mr. Roosevelt's leadership of his party in Congress may be his statement that he would be satisfied to see Republicans win over Democrats, wherever the Republicans are what he defines as liberal, while the Democratic candidates are not.

That statement of Mr. Roosevelt was not deliberate. It was impetuous, made in the spirit of not taking a dare, when he was in a mood of irritation at a press conference and newspapermen asked him the question to which that statement was his answer.

Unless Mr. Roosevelt backtracks from that position, he will be led farther into defection from the Democratic Party. And it is not Mr. Roosevelt's nature to backtrack. Rather, having taken one impetuous step, he is likely to take more in the same direction.

After the primaries are over, as the November election approaches, he will be called on by circumstances to make good on his statement. For example, if Senator Tydings wins the Democratic nomination in Maryland, and if the Republican candidates can be made to seem to conform to Mr. Roosevelt's definition of liberal—in that event will Mr. Roosevelt wish the Republican to win? There will be other similar situations.

• • • •

MR. ROOSEVELT'S statement was that he would be satisfied with liberal Republicans as against conservative Democrats. But Democrats everywhere will consider that Mr. Roosevelt's position goes also for liberal third party candidates.

He will be called upon to say, in specific cases, whether against a conservative Democrat, he prefers a candidate of the Farmer-Labor Party, or of the American Labor Party, or of the La Follettes' National Progressive Party.

All this will have happened before the new Congress meets in January.

The Democratic majority in that Congress, remembering what Mr. Roosevelt has done, will hardly feel much obligation to follow his leadership. Rather, its mood is likely to be one of defiance, sullen or open.

Hitler's Boast

By Barnet Nover

Could Germany Withstand A Blockade?

TO those Germans who are old enough to remember the World War, and that means all those who are above the age of 25, no word has more terrifying connotations than the word blockade.

It was to break the tightening ring around the Reich that the German high command ordered the resumption of unrestricted submarine warfare in 1917, a decision that led the United States to join the Allies. The gamble failed. Great Britain was not starved out, although at one moment in the last year of war she came perilously near to it. And the iron ring around Germany was unbroken, with the result that it was the Central Powers which were in the end starved into submission.

• • • •

THE MEMORY of the World War blockade, brutally continued long after the Armistice, explains certain important developments in Germany today. It explains, for instance, the determination to achieve autarchy — self-containment—which dominates the Third Reich's economic life today. And it also explains one reason for the great wave of alarm that swept Germany when the current mobilization measures were put into force. The great majority of Germans, it can be taken for granted, do not want war and they particularly do not want a war in which Germany would be isolated and blockaded.

No doubt it was for the precise reason of exorcising this fear of a return to war-time deprivations that led Hitler in his speech at Nuremberg on Tuesday to boast that a blockade could no longer injure Germany or bring her to her knees.

"On the whole," he said, "German economy is being so constructed that at any time it can be completely independent from other countries and stand on its own feet." And with regard to the Third Reich's food situation he boasted that because of a good harvest this year and the carry-over from previous years Germany need have "no food worries for years to come" although frugality will continue to be exercised so as to permit the building of a reserve of bread grain which "under all circumstances" will protect Germany from every need.

• • • •

HOW JUSTIFIED is Hitler's boast?

Without adequate food supplies, without adequate raw material resources Germany obviously could not fight a war of any duration.

So far as the food is concerned, all the available evidence indicates that, despite enormous efforts, Germany is just as far away from self-containment as she was in 1933, when Hitler came into power, and when only 80 per cent of the country's food needs was met by domestic production. The addition of Austria helped somewhat with respect to the Reich's requirements of milk, butter and cheese and livestock, but it increased the nation's shortage of cereals. Thus if during the past few years the Germans have been asked to tighten their belts more and more, to be content with cannon instead of butter, the presumption must be that in the event of a major war whatever supplies the Nazi regime may have stored up for emergency purposes would prove insufficient to prevent the nation from speedily going on short rations.

• • • •

AN ARMY, and in modern war the whole nation is part of the armed forces, marches on its stomach, as Napoleon said. But it fights with steel and ferro-alloys and rubber and oil, with cotton and copper, with coal and wood and with all the other raw materials required by modern industry. How self-sufficient is Germany today with respect to such essentials?

There can be no doubt that during the past five years a good deal of progress has been made in Germany, if sometimes at great cost, to provide adequate substitutes for raw materials which are not produced in sufficient quantities within her borders. An amazing ingenuity has been displayed in this particular, and the list of ersatz (substitute) products, particularly those made from coal and wood, grows almost daily. Yet there is a limit to the practice of robbing Peter to pay Paul. Thus, while Germany can probably produce her full peace-time needs of synthetic gasoline and oil, in fact it may do so before this year is out, it is questionable whether she can meet full wartime needs that way. For wartime consumption would probably be at least twice, and possibly several times, as great as present consumption. To make up the difference synthetically, it is estimated by Willson Woodside in the current Harper's, would mean increasing present oil-from-coal production by 20 times.

• • • •

THROUGH the addition of Austria, Germany's supply of iron ore was considerably supplemented. Yet even if the deposits are worked at their theoretical maximum, Austrian ore production will cover only a fourth of the 20,600,000 tons which the Reich has been forced to import from abroad, principally from Sweden. And here again war-time needs are certain to be vastly in excess of peace-time requirements.

Germany's position with respect to ferro-alloys is even worse than with respect to iron ore. Of the 12 "critical raw materials" listed by Brooks Emeny in his "The Strategy of Raw Materials," namely, rubber, manganese, nickel, chromite, tungsten, wool, potash, phosphates, antimony, tin, mercury and mica, Germany is rich only in potash.

Synthetic rubber (buna) now being produced in the Third Reich constitutes about 20 per cent of the normal needs. And while this production is being stepped up such an expansion may take time before it begins to cover a major portion of even normal German consumption. Synthetic wool production is also increasing in Germany but is proving, in most particulars to be a poor substitute for the natural product. Of most of the others, Germany has little or no supplies at all and the addition of Austria's relatively meager mineral resources (she is rich only in iron ore and magnesite) has not helped matters much.

• • • •

TO BE SURE practically all of the raw materials in this category can be accumulated and stored. But Germany's import statistics for the past few years do not indicate that she has a sufficient quantity of these essentials to meet the exigencies of war-time.

All in all, therefore, Hitler's boast at Nuremberg, to put it in its most charitable light, would seem to be little more than a reassurance to the German people that they have nothing to fear and not based on facts known to him. If, on the other hand, the Fuehrer actually believes what he says, his statement must be viewed as an extremely ominous one. For then it means that the Nazi regime feels that to accomplish its ends in Czechoslovakia the possibility of the involvement of Russia, France and even Great Britain in a war in central Europe can be ignored. No more dangerous calculation could be made by those who hold the destinies of the German people in their hands.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 15, Just Trying Her Wings in Field of Beaux, Asks How to Deal With Two-Timer.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 15 and have been going with boys for about a year. For the last few months I have been going with one boy rather regularly. About three weeks ago he fixed up a date for me with one of his friends. I went and thought nothing of it until this fellow started to rush me. He kept telephoning me and coming around to see me. Then some of my friends suggested it might be a put-up job, and after thinking it over I have decided it looks that way to me.

* * * *

I have been checking up and have learned that the first boy has been going steadily with another girl all the time he has been going with me; and that he has been using me as a "goat"—coming to see me when he had no place else to go. Two Sundays ago I had a telephone call from the second boy (supposedly) asking if I would care to drive to the beach that day. I accepted and waited two hours for him to come. Finally I telephoned him and he knew nothing whatever about it—or so he said. We agreed that it must have been the other boy's idea of a joke.

* * * *

A few days later, I saw this boy and said something to him about his "other girl." He didn't deny it, but refused to talk about it. But to get to the point—what shall I do? Tell him what I know and just break off, or continue to go with him, at the risk of playing the fool? If I do break off, how shall I go about it? And should I continue to go with his friend? The latter seems to like me, and I don't think he suspects (as I do) that the first boy is trying to wish me off on him. Please answer soon.

PUZZLED.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR PUZZLED: For purposes of discussion, let's designate these boys as A and B. This is my analysis of the situation—it is possible, even probable, that A was trying to get himself out of some sort of real or fancied jam when he "fixed up" the date for you with B, but I am positive the latter's assiduous "rushing" of you thereafter was not a "put-up" job. Why am I so sure? Because no man is sufficiently unselfish to carry a practical joke to that extent—not even to oblige a friend. Whatever interest B has shown in you, since the time of the first date, has been genuine interest, inspired by your own particular brand of companionability.

* * * *

If A's behavior, since that time, has been such as to indicate that he is trying to keep a practical jokester's finger in the pie, it is probably because he is piqued or chagrined by the spontaneous and sincere liking that seems to have sprung up between you and B. He may be trying to throw a monkey wrench into the works by getting you down on B. He might even be willing to go so far, now, as to tell your mutual friends (including B) that his original idea in "fixing up" the date was to ease himself out of your claims on him.

* * * *

It is perfectly possible that he did have the idea, at one time, that he was stuck with you; that he was going to have difficulty in breaking off his association with you, and that he is now considerably mortified to perceive the ease with which you can annex a successor to him. Perhaps his plan has worked too well—so well that it has badly bruised his self-esteem and now seems to him to call for a follow-up face-saving program of another sort. If such is the case (and it well may be), he is low-bred in the extreme, and he and his petty chicanery deserve to be ignored.

* * * *

If you have sound reason to suspect him of double-dealing, or of trying to make a fool of you, don't make any further engagements with him, and don't honor him with detailed explanations of a reproachful or stiff-necked sort. If he telephones, be brief, bland and noncommittal in conversation if he suggests a date, tell him you have other plans for the afternoon or evening; if he drops in to call, be busy with other things and leave him on the family's hands or, as an alternative, tell him you were just going out and that no, he can't possibly go along. Don't bother to be too convincing in your excuses; let him suspect that they're transparent: social devices; that he is, in short, and so far as you're concerned, being thrown out on his ear. Don't show the slightest curiosity concerning his "other girl." Such an attitude is a breach of etiquette, for one thing; and for another thing, it is poor strategy under the circumstances.

* * * *

As for B, continue seeing him if you enjoy his company. And don't make the mistake of discussing the pros and cons and whys and wherefores of A's behavior with him. Try to forget, as much as possible, the fact that it was A who brought you together. Let the friendship between you flourish on its own power.

M. H.

Know and Stick To Your Type, Says Miss Hillis

Author Cites Six Types of College Girl; Warns of Being Exactly Any One Of Them.

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

KNOW your type and stick to it, if you wish to be a success in college or in any other walk of life, Marjorie Hillis, author, famous for her witty tome, "Live Alone and Like It," told an absorbed audience of women who attended her fashion showing of personally selected college apparel at a local department store yesterday afternoon.

Miss Hillis, who conducts a column for the edification of the "Terrifying Teens," in a woman's magazine of national circulation, discussing fashions in clothes and deportment, is a reliable authority on the perplexing problem of what to wear at school this fall. Moreover, her popular "Live Alone and Like It," "Orchids on Your Budget" and "Work Ends at Nightfall," her newest effort, are all books which the up-to-the-minute college girl plans to include on her "must" list, along with Miss Hillis' specifications in the matter of wardrobe.

"The whole secret of dressing to suit your type," Miss Hillis told her audience, "is to keep one model and let it be a mental picture—not of the Duchess of Windsor or the little ingenue who was such a knockout at all the dances—but a glorified you. The person you would like to be. The person you could be if you should stress and develope every single one of your good points and subdue every single one of your bad ones."

Know Yourself First.

Speaking directly to the college-age members of her audience, Miss Hillis continued: "And now that you are going to college, it isn't a day too soon to begin taking stock of yourself. You should sit down and make a list of your own characteristics and abilities; write down every single thing you do well and enjoy doing, whether it's driving a car or working in the gym or bandaging a cut finger or writing a poem, or making pickles and pies. Women have built careers and fortunes and personalities on funnier things than any of these. Once you've gotten thoroughly acquainted with this person you really are, you'll begin to feel a new ambition."

"You will know," she said, "what you want to do in college and why—and out of college, for that matter. You'll begin to know how to dress to suit your type, because you'll know what type you are, and in a far more subtle way than just height and weight and coloring. You'll be on the road to creating a type, which is far cleverer and more successful than merely copying one."

Describes Six Types.

Miss Hillis' fashion showing included garments suitable for the six different types of feminity found on every campus, as well as in every walk of life. The first she designated as the Perfect Wife type, at once the most difficult and desirable of models—who must be chic, healthy, dainty, appetizing looking and never too ultra. The second she called the Too Too Tweedy type, who shortsightedly overlooks the fact that "there are soft tweeds and charming sweaters and more feminine hats that still have a suitably casual look.

There was the Sophisticate, or Worldly-Woman type, who has a natural feeling for chic and goes in for cocktail dresses, for smart black-white, and mannish evening clothes. Fourth was the President-of-Everything type, who is a general favorite at college because she is a good mixer and a natural conformist. "She wants the best of everything and that's an almost perfect recipe for a college wardrobe," Miss Hillis said. "At college, she goes to class in a well-cut tweed skirt and a Brook's sweater that fits and a good string of pearls; or in a smart two-piece dress, and she goes to a dance in a well-made, becoming version of the most popular style of the moment."

She described the Going-to-Get-There type of girl as a specialist in one of two variations—the frankly efficient, whose clothes are trim and well tailored, or the "iron hand in the velvet glove, who uses all her femininity to get her own way."

She closed her show with the Poor-Little-Me Girl type, "the one who is eternally saying, 'that's perfectly lovely, but it wouldn't do for me'—the girl who always has last year's hair cut, an uninteresting dress and a hat you'd never notice," because nothing smart ever does for her.

Miss Hillis' parting shot at her audience was: "Don't be any of these types, exactly. Create your own type and your own career. You may be more interesting than Sarah Bernhardt, more useful than Mme. Curie and more popular than—well, shall I say Peggy Joyce? Anyway, you'll be a success * * *"

A Woman's New York

New York, Sept. 7.

WELL, WE lived through our Big Day along the Hudson piers. There's always one when fate and steam combine to bring a flock of ferryboats into this growing port almost simultaneously, which naturally sends us press slaves hopping on our pogo sticks from one dock to another. The Big Un this year brought 8,000 passengers to town on 15 ships of all sizes, and did we scoot from tug to tug!

ALICE HUGHES.

There were dozens of headline names, of course—like Edsel Ford and Secretary Morgenthau, whose arrival brought Mrs. President to the Normandie as chief greeter. Warren Pershing and his pretty bride, "Mu" Richards, came in from a round-the-world honeymoon, and many reporters voted Mrs. Hugh Pickering the prettiest arrival of the day. And we waved our hankies gaily at another bride on the Normandie—Diana Fishwick, the great British golfer, who came to town with her new husband, Gen. Alfred C. Critchley. But I and my ilk brushed these great folk off in favor of the lady style leaders and oracles who came in by the ton from the Paris openings—looking very smart and spry.

We especially looked at their heads—and found that most of them had eaten the words of Paris, and had had their hair done up high—leaving the neck exposed to the elements and soot. Why, Hattie Carnegie, the noted seamstress of Fifty-seventh street, tripped off the Normandie with the new hair-do, and actually carrying her hat in her hand. Seven milliners fainted dead away! Those of us who still cling to the dear old long bob felt mighty tacky, I fear, in the face of this overwhelming verdict from Gals who Lead. But do we have to follow, in this land of free men and costly hair-do's? No indeed, Carnegie or no Carnegie! Don't be swept away, ladies, by the orders of the beauty parlors!

Metabolism Held a Basic Body Function

Digestion Plus Respiration Plus Circulation Combine to Set Off Needed Energy in Muscles.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The central thing that we do is to make our muscles move. Of course, it would be more logical to say that the central thing we do is to think. We are going to discuss that somewhat tomorrow and will reserve the debate until then, simply saying that movement of muscles is what all the processes of digestion and respiration and circulation are formed to produce. Digestion gets from food energy for the muscles; respiration gets oxygen to produce the spark; the circulation brings them together to the muscles, where the energy is to be utilized.

That, of course, is not all there is to this process of metabolism. But the muscle makes a typical unit to study the processes of metabolism or nutrition.

The movement of the muscle, the thing that does the work, depends on the metabolism of sugar. Most of the sugar in the body comes from the starch in the food. In order to make a muscle contract, glucose sugar has to unite with oxygen in the body of the muscle itself.

When the muscle begins to grow or hypertrophy because there is more work to be done, then is protein required for metabolism.

In contracting, the muscles require certain minerals to be present in the surrounding blood in order to function smoothly. A lack of calcium will cause a purposeless contraction called "tetany," for instance. And vitamins affect at least the nerve impulses, if not the muscle fibers themselves.

So in this apparently simple process of the contracting of a muscle, we have the utilization of all the foodstuffs absorbed in digestion except fat. And it is quite possible that the metabolism of fat plays some part in muscular contraction. From a study of the tension of muscles in which the carbohydrates had been reduced by insulin convulsion, Myerhof and Gemmill concluded that part of the total energy is supplied by other material than carbohydrate, and that material must be fat.

Metabolic changes, of course, go on in other organs.

Joan Crawford Needs to Gain, Miss Kain Says

Hard-Working, Ambitious Star Should Relax More to Keep Vitality, Health and Energy.

By Ida Jean Kain.

JOAN CRAWFORD needs a little meat on her bones if she is to stay young in spite of the intensive program her varied careers seem to require. Probably Miss Crawford would dismiss such a suggestion as preposterous, for she is very proud of her ultra streamlines and has been known to point to her hip bones and say, "Look; just like Connie Bennett's!" Well, Connie Bennett is too thin, too.

But it's Miss Crawford whose thinness may endanger her health and looks. She drives herself too relentlessly. Although the story of her rise to fame is one of the most interesting Hollywood has to tell, this ambitious star is not content with her success in the movies. Her aim now is to become a great star of the footlights, an opera singer and a radio star.

Now, if you drive yourself as relentlessly as Miss Crawford does, you need a certain amount of weight to protect your vitality, and you only have this reserve energy if you have made allowance for time to relax. When does she relax? All her program makes for a successful career and a perfect figure, but it is likely to make one old, too, for it allows no time for the complete relaxation that is necessary to counterbalance such terrific strain. Most of us need at least an hour's complete relaxation every day in order to stay young, and Miss Crawford may need more.

Mrs. Robert H. Moran Is Matron of Honor at Formal Ceremony in All Saints' Episcopal Church; Reginald Beard Is Best Man for His Brother; Couple Leave for Lake George, N. Y.

In a formal ceremony in Chevy Chase, Miss Phyllis Jane Hohenstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wallace Hohenstein, yesterday afternoon became the bride of Edward Prescott Beard, son of Mrs. William H. Beard.

All Saints' Episcopal Church was the scene of the wedding which took place at 4:30 p. m. with the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke officiating. White gladioli, lilies and palms decorated the church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in pink satin made with a square neck, long sleeves and a long train. Her Juliet cap of pink satin was trimmed with clusters of pink blossoms on either side and was finished with a pink tulle face veil in front and another falling the length of the train in the back. A bouquet of pink roses blending with the gown completed the bride's ensemble.

Mrs. Robert Moran Is Matron of Honor

Mrs. Robert E. Moran, the matron of honor, wore powder blue taffeta with a billowing skirt, square neck, puffed sleeves and trimmed with dubonnet velvet ribbon. Her small hat was of dubonnet velvet that contrasted nicely with her blond hair, and she carried a bouquet of dark red roses.

Miss Maitland Macdonald, Miss Anna Lee Stuart, Miss Marie Horning, Miss Elizabeth Gude, Miss Jeremy Hohenstein and Miss Barbara Wells were the other attendants. They wore frocks of powder blue taffeta cut on lines similar to that of the matron of honor. Pink velvet ribbon was used to trim their frocks as well as their small blue velvet hats.

Reginald Beard was his brother's best man and ushers included Austin Rohrbaugh, Thomas Fuller Southgate, Newton Brewer, Charles W. Camalier, Dr. Robert E. Moran and Dr. William H. Beard.

Following the wedding there was a reception at the Columbia Country Club where mothers of the bride and bridegroom joined members of the wedding party in receiving the guests. Mrs. Hohenstein was gowned in aquamarine chiffon, worn with a wide-brimmed black velvet hat, and Mrs. Beard wore a frock of ice green lace with a small brown velvet hat.

Couple to Make Home in Washington

Shortly after the reception, the newly-wed couple left for a trip to Lake George, New York. As her traveling costume, the bride had chosen a tan tailored frock with a matching hat, and a green and brown plaid sports coat with brown accessories. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Beard will make their home at 2603 Thirty-seventh street.

The former Miss Hohenstein attended George Washington University and is now enrolled at the Corcoran Art School. The bridegroom was a student at Duke University before entering Georgetown University Law School, where he will continue his course as soon as he and the bride return from their wedding trip.

Mrs Beard numbers among her ancestors Gen. George Wallace Jones and Gen. Grant. Among out-of-town guests at the wedding yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Leslie W. Wells, of Reading, Pa.; Mrs. Nalon D. Lewis, of New Rochelle, N. Y.; Mrs. Thomas F. Southgate and Thomas F. Southgate, jr., of Durham, N. C., and Mrs. Margaret Hill of Mississippi.

Mr. Bingham, Miss Sedore Wed in Garden

J. Bruce Kremer Home at Silver Spring Is Scene Of Nuptials; Couple Off On Iowa Honeymoon.

One of the Capital's loveliest gardens yesterday afternoon was the setting for a quiet wedding at which Miss Dorothy Sedore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Sedore, of Ottuna, Iowa, and Rupert Bingham exchanged vows.

Dr. Raphael H. Miller officiated at the 3:30 o'clock ceremony which was performed before an impovised garden altar at the Spring Valley home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bruce Kremer. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Kremer and the late Herbert Mackay Bingham.

Standards and tall jars filled with white lilies and gladioli enhanced the beauty of the garden and set off the aisle and altar. Since the parents of the bride could not attend, the wedding was a small affair attended by relatives and a few close friends of the bride and bridegroom.

Mrs. Herbert Bingham Bride's Only Attendant

The former Miss Sedore had chosen a tailored suit as her wedding ensemble. Fashioned in two tones of blue with a dark skirt and a light coat, it was worn with a jaunty dark blue felt hat and accessories to match and a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Herbert Mackay Bingham, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was matron of honor and the bride's only attendant. Her frock of steel blue crepe was fashioned on simple lines and worn with a black felt hat trimmed to match the dress. A corsage of orchids competed her costume.

Herbert Mackay Bingham was his brother's best man and there were no ushers. Following the wedding the bride and bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bingham and Mr. and Mrs. Kremer greeted the guests at the informal reception, which also took place in the garden. MISS RUTH MILES BAXTER.

Mrs. George J. Baxter Announces Daughter's Betrothal to Treasury Department Attorney; Bride Elect, Kindergarten Teacher, Is Interested in Various Forms of Art; Wedding Set for November.

Mrs. George Jackson Baxter announces the engagement of her daughter, Ruth Miles Baxter, to Charles Conrad Wise, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Conrad Wise, of Staunton, Va., and Washington.

Miss Baxter, a kindergarten teacher in the public schools here, is an art pupil of Ethel Hoffman Kane, who presented her in a program of Debussy. She assisted Wladishaw T. Benda, of New York, in a demonstration of his masks for the Society of Fine Arts last winter, and was premier danseuse of the Arts Club Bal Boheme last January.

Mr. Wise, a graduate of George Washington University and of the George Washington University Law School, is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, and of Delta Theta Phi, national legal fraternity. He is an attorney with the Treasury Department.

The wedding will take place in November.

Mrs. Kane Sets Next Exhibit At Her Galleries Monday

Mrs. Norman Kane, co-director of the Georgetown Galleries, has just returned from New York, where she attended several art exhibitions and went to the studios of many widely known artists searching for work to be shown here this winter. Among painters whose work Mrs. Kane has arranged to have displayed here are Corinn and Guy Rowe, whose canvases and prints have been exhibited here before. Their more recent work will be shown at the Georgetown Galleries in November.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Kane and Miss Gladys Kerr, the other director of the galleries, are completing plans for the next exhibition, which will be open from September 13 to October 2. A preview of the display will be held Monday evening, when Mrs. Kane and Miss Kerr will receive a number of art lovers and critics at the galleries.

The show will include paintings, water colors and lithographs of two young women painters, Miss Marguerite Burgess, of Brookmont, Md., and Mrs. William Evans Hall, wife of Lieut. Hall. Miss Burgess will show some of her most recent work, several scenes she did this summer in St. Marys City. Mrs. Hall, the former Miss Helena Galloway, of Atlanta, Ga., will exhibit a number of portraits, landscapes and still life pictures.

Mrs. Hall is widely known both in social and service circles here. She attended Holton Arms School here before studying art at the High Museum in her native city. Since coming to Washington to live she has continued her art studies and has been a pupil of Richard Lahey at the Corcoran Art School.

Both Mrs. Hall and Miss Burgess will be present at the preview of their exhibition Monday. Also planning to attend the reception is Mrs. Arthur Anderson, of Scarsdale, N. Y., who returned from New York with Mrs. Kane and will be the latter's house guest for several days.

Soroptomist's 'Best Talker,' Mrs. Newman

She Gets a Free Lunch for Telling of Her Summer Events; Letter Is Read From English Delegate.

Members of the Soroptomist Club met yesterday at luncheon at the Willard Hotel for the first meeting of the fall season. Plans had been laid for a real "get-together," and everyone was urged to tell what she had been doing and where she had been during the summer, with the "best talker" getting free lunch. Mrs. Agnes Newman, president of the group, captured the prize.

During the luncheon a letter was read from Miss Elizabeth Hawes, president of the British Federation of the Soroptomist International Association, in which she said that she was sending to the Washington Club a Union Jack as a gift in appreciation of the many kindenesses shown her by the local organization during the recent convention in Atlantic City.

Mrs. Ella Hildebrandt entertained her daughter, Mrs. Vivian Thompson, as a guest at yesterday's meeting, while Miss Marjorie Webster had as her guest Mrs. Hazel Leight, of LaCrosse, Wis. Dr. R. Bain entertained Mrs. Irving Frickey.

The board of directors will meet at the Willard September 8 at 8 o'clock in the evening, and September 17 Mrs. Newman will entertain the Soroptomists at a picnic dinner at her country home south of Alexandria.

Miss Mae Vance To Give Musicale At Home Tonight

Miss Mae H. Vance will entertain at a garden party and musicale this evening at 9 o'clock at her Chevy Chase home. Fifty guests have been invited to hear Mrs. Horace Allen, soprano, sing accompanied by Miss Carolyn Woods.

Among those who plan to attend the party are Mr. and Mrs. Turin Bradford Boone, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Calhoun, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Jones, Mrs. Preston Burch, Dr. and Mrs. R. Stephen Pendexter, Miss Blondelle Malone, of Alexandria, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Morgan, of Forest Glen, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Washington, Miss Pherne Miller, Miss Margaret Keegan, Miss Margaret Louise O'Brien, George Kenyon Traber and William Day Vance.

Miss Hardy to Go To Convention of Legion Auxiliary

Miss Minnie May Hardy, president of the District Department of the American Legion Auxiliary, will leave today for Los Angeles to attend the national convention there from September 19 to September 22. She will be hostess at the District table at the States dinner on Wednesday evening, September 21, at the Biltmore Hotel. It is expected that the affair will be attended by 2,000 persons.

Others attending the States dinner from Washington will be Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, retiring department president; Miss Edna McIntosh, past department president; Mrs. E. Louise Warren, department secretary; Mrs. Catherine Waters and Mrs. Myrtle Spudis, department color bearers; and Mrs. Helen McCabe, department historian.

Bedtime Stories

—By Thornton W. Burgess

Jerry's Fears Are Realized.

There's satisfaction all folks know
In saying just "I told you so."
—Jerry Muskrat.

The farther Jerry Muskrat got from his home in the Smiling Pool the more disgruntled and pessimistic he became. That is a long word, but the meaning is simple. One who expects the worst and sees only the dark side of life is pessimistic. The world is full of pessimists. Jerry Muskrat was one.

Jerry was with Mrs. Jerry. They had left the Smiling Pool, gone down the Laughing Brook to the Big River, down this for some distance, and now Mrs. Jerry proposed that they leave the Big River and go overland to a slough, a shallow pond amid marshy surroundings, that she had previously visited and where she proposed that they should make a new home if Jerry approved.

So far Jerry hadn't approved. In the first place he didn't want to make that journey. He had started under protest because of Mrs. Jerry's insistence and because she had succeeded in making him realize the food supply for the coming winter was short. He had complained all the way down the Laughing Brook and still more along the Big River. When Mrs. Jerry had climbed the bank and started across the dry land he had openly revolted.

"Hold on; wait a minute," squeaked Jerry.

"You are crazy, just plain crazy," he asserted. "It is bad enough to be in strange waters, but for a Muskrat to travel on land away from water is sheer craziness. If you think I am going to follow you just think again."

Mrs. Jerry admitted that there was some risk but insisted that there was not much and that when they reached the pond she was leading him to Jerry would forget the journey and its risks.

"Anyway it is late for any of the big owls to be hunting and it is a bit early for any of the big Hawks to be about, and who else is there whom we need fear?" said she.

"Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy. Have you forgotten them?" snapped Jerry in a most unpleasant tone.

"No, I haven't forgotten them," replied Mrs. Jerry. "Of course, one of them might just happen along while we are crossing to that pond, but I'll take the chance. This is a long way from the Old Pasture where they live and it isn't likely that either of them will be around here at this time of day."

"But one of them might come along, or a Dog might find us," persisted Jerry.

"Suit yourself," retorted Mrs. Jerry crossly, for she was fast losing patience. "Go back if you want to but don't expect me to return."

"Hold on! Wait a minute!" squeaked Jerry as Mrs. Jerry turned her back squarely on him and the Big River and started off across the meadow.

Mrs. Jerry didn't wait a minute. She didn't wait at all. She didn't even glance back. She kept right on going. Jerry took a few steps after her, stopped, took a few more stopped a second time, then started after her, stopped, took a few more, such a hurry! Wait for me! I've changed my mind," he panted.

Mrs. Jerry waited. "I still think you're crazy," he panted as he joined her.

"I thought you had changed your mind," said she.

"Not about that," replied Jerry. "I've changed my mind about going with you. I just hope Reddy Fox isn't around. If he is it will be just too bad."

They were just two-thirds of the way over to that slough when Jerry gave a little squeak of dismay. His fears were realized. There in front of them was Reddy Fox. Mrs. Jerry moved over beside Jerry, and they rolled back their lips to show their long cutting teeth. Reddy Fox lifted his lips for the same purpose. Would Jerry and Mrs. Jerry get to the water in that slough or would Reddy Fox get the breakfast he wanted?

Andrews Picks Paul Sifton as Wage Law Aide

Studies Social Security's Regional Set-Up for Possible Model.

Plans for a far-flung regional service for inspection and enforcement of wage-hour standards began to take form yesterday as Administrator Elmer F. Andrews added another official to his Washington staff and perfected organization details.

Andrews appointed Paul Sifton, former deputy industrial commissioner of New York under Andrews, to be deputy administrator of the Federal wage-hour law, which goes into national operation in six weeks.

Meanwhile, the wage-hour administrator studied the Social Security Board's vast regional set-up as a posible model for the wage and hour division's field service. He said decision had not yet been reached on the form, but the regional set-up will be charged with explaining the law, inspections and enforcements. They will co-operate closely with State labor agencies.

Appointment Deferred.

Expected appointment of industrial committees for the textile and tobacco industries were deferred pending further contact with prospective members. These were the first industries selected by Andrews as a testing ground for adjustment of wages above the first year 25-cent minimums. Andrews said a final decision still must be reached on the definite scope of the textile industry. The tobacco industry is to be divided between two committees, one for cigars and another for cigarettes and other tobacco. Andrews revealed that the division would move next in the dress and shoe industries.

"Our plan is to cover as much territory in each industry as possible," he said. "We are not thinking of separate committees for each small branch of an industry, as was the case under NRA."

Andrews said the division planned shortly to publish a definition of interstate commerce "general enough to apply universally" without naming specific industries that will come under the law. He said "border-line" industries could then come before the division and make their case.

He indicated the division would seek to prevent suits by workers against employers failing to conform to the act before the scope had been determined.

As Friend of Court.

"If an employer gets into court trouble as a result of anything we did here, we would go into the case as a friend of the court to help the employer," he said.

Sifton's appointment as deputy administrator followed appointment last week of A. L. Fletcher, former North Carolina labor commissioner, as assistant wage-hour administrator in charge of compliance. Next week, Andrews said, he will establish an information bureau to clear data for the press. The chief counsel of the division, and a number of assistants, will be appointed later this week.

Prior to yesterday's appointment, Sifton had been aiding Andrews in the preliminary organization work. A graduate of the University of Missouri, where he majored in political science and economics, Sifton entered newspaper work before going with the New York State labor department in 1934. He had previously worked for newspapers in New York City, Chicago, Kansas City and Washington.

Andrews, while New York industrial commissioner, appointed Sifton as his assistant in 1935 and two years later made him deputy commissioner. He aided in formulating and enforcing New York's minimum wage law.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Mrs. Woodring . . . unspoiled.

WAR SCARE: They say the State Department spoke over the transatlantic phone a dozen times in one day—but F. D. R. hasn't had a phone chat with Hitler yet . . . Never did the President wear a eagler expression than when he opened his mouth, closed it and declined to say a word about the European situation.

* * * *

For 100 years American soldiers were rationed 20 ounces of fresh beef a day; now it's 10 ounces, with 2 of bacon and 4 of fresh pork . . . And the 20-ounce ration of potatoes has been cut to 10 ounces. They used to get 5 ounces of onions, too; now it's only 2, but they get other dainties like jam and pineapple instead. Just to streamline and modernize the soldier.

* * * *

CAPITAL CAVIAR: One of the few unspoiled beauties in the Capital is Helen Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War . . . Her father, the former Senator Coolidge, of Massachusetts, has coffee, olive oil and maple syrup shipped specially to him from New Hampshire when he's in Florida . . . His beer comes from Czechoslovakia.

"—the tourists are agog"

Few sights in Washington drive the tourist young so goggle-eyed as the 78-foot dinosaur skeleton at the National Museum . . . It's an almost perfect specimen; just lay down and died a few million years ago and was found almost in one piece . . . Then the tourists can taxi for 20 or 30 cents to the new German Embassy and see how far we've progressed in a few million years.

* * * *

Alf Landon didn't tell all in his recent articles about how glad he is not to be President . . . He didn't tell, for example, of the time his entourage, during the 1936 campaign (when he was sicker than anyone admitted), put him to bed at 10:30 and told him they were all sleepy and going to bed early.

About 1 a. m. a Presidential candidate in blue pajamas stormed into the room where the poker game was going on, demanded a highball and gave 'em a piece of his mind.

It didn't break up the poker game, though.

* * * *

GILT OFF THE DOME: The British are nudging each other and saying that in Ambassador Joe Kennedy they have at last a typical American . . . They also told each other that Walter Hines Page, Col. George Harvey, Gen. Dawes, Andy Mellon and Robert Bingham were all typical Americans . . . These gentlemen undoubtedly had some points of dissimilarity; it's amazing how many different kinds of Americans can be typical.

"—glorifying the Nazi boy"

Those handsome German soldier boys you see in steel helmets are handpicked like chorus men for the pictures by the Nazi propaganda ministry . . . They are picked (1) for good looks, to impress the ladies, and (2) for warlike appearance, to intimidate foreign statesmen . . . That takes quite a bit of picking, especially as the ranks are now filled with the underfed war babies of 1914-18, who are neither great beauties nor especially formidable in appearance.

* * * *

Like a father pampering an ailing child, President Roosevelt has been helping the Labor Relations Board by reading its press releases aloud regularly at his press conferences . . . To underline this press agent role he said something quite forthright about not getting the right publicity . . . It's too easy to forget that Mr. Roosevelt was once chairman (editor-in-chief) of the Harvard Crimson.

* * * *

THOUGHTS WHILE SHAVING: It's rumored Alice Longworth will get $1,000 fee for each lecture this fall, and she's worth every cent of it . . . Best analysis of the "purge" I've heard: "The President has a right to express his opinion of any candidate, and the voters have a right to vote as they please" . . . FDR's Maryland speech will be a great state paper (perhaps in Volume VI of the collected works), but as a campaign speech in the Free State's free-for-all campaign it was rather gentle.

Severe Rains Flood Streets In Northwest

Arkansas Ave. and 13th Street Area Sewers Backwater.

A 50-minute thundershower last night flooded a low-lying northwest section of the District in 4 feet of water, marooned four motorists and their autos, and filled cellars of a dozen homes.

A lightning bolt destroyed the barn of John Sutton, at Glenmont, Md. Damage was estimated at $500. Electric power in the Chevy Chase area was cut off for three minutes when the rain caused a short circuit.

The shower, which started at 7:03 p. m. dropped the temperature from 80 to 70 degrees. About one-half inch of rain fell in 50 minutes.

The miniature flood hit Arkansas avenue, Thirteenth and Emerson streets northwest. A park bordered by the three streets was submerged and traffic was tied up for 45 minutes.

Trapped by back waters from overfilled sewers, three autos and a taxicab had to be pulled out by the fire rescue squad.

Sits Atop Back Seat.

Indignant citizens, irate over the repeated floods during the past 20 years, last night declared they planned to make a protest against what they termed an inadequate sewage system. Old residents said the "flood" was the worst in 20 years.

Pressure in the sewers became so great during the height of the storm, witnesses said, that manhole covers were pushed off and 8-foot fountains gushed at Thirteenth street and Delafield place, and at Thirteenth and Emerson streets.

Douglass Davis, of 1213 Euclid street northwest, was driving along Thirteenth street near the park when the rising water stalled his engine. He managed to drive onto a driveway at Arkansas avenue, but had to climb to the top of the back seat to keep from getting wet.

Dozen Cellars Flooded.

Although Robert Brinkley, of 1013 M street northwest, drove his cab into Thireenth street when there were only several inches of water in it, within a few minutes the water had risen to the windows of the cab, and Brinkley had to wade out through water up to his chest. A third auto, driven by Dr. Walter Vogel, of 3900 Fourteenth street northwest, caught a wheel in a manhole at Arkansas avenue and Emerson street after the cover blew up under the car.

At least a dozen cellars were flooded in this section. Frank C. Austermuhl, of 4904 Arkansas avenue, who has been living there for the past 18 years, said that he has seen a dozen floods in that time. J. B. Dexter, of 4906 Arkansas avenue, declared that in his 21 years there his cellar had been flooded three times.

Cellars were also flooded at the homes of Miss Jane Dodge, 1301 Delafield place; Mrs. George H. Heimers, 1217 Emerson street; Miss Ella Booraem, 1301 Emerson street; Mrs. Hugh Keiser, 4807 Arkansas avenue, and C. B. Cumings, 1300 Delafield place.

2 Amnesia Victims Identified Here; One Is a Veteran

Two victims of amnesia, one a World War veteran, were identified last night at Gallinger Hospital within two hours.

An aged man, found at Nebraska avenue and Reno road northwest early in the evening was identified as Patrick H. Magner, 71, of 613 Orleans place northeast, retired railroad employe. Identification was made by his daughter, Mrs. Agnes Sprouse.

Shortly afterward a man who asked police Tuesday to help learn his name was identified as Daniel Oakes, about 40, of 5101 Lee Highway, Arlington, Va. His attorney, Franklin V. Anderson, of Falls Church, Va., visited the hospital after recognizing newspaper pictures.

6 'Salute' Children Go to School 1 Day

For the first time in two years the six children of Mr. and Mrs. August A. Ludke, of Silver Hill, Md., members of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect, were allowed to attend a public school yesterday, but it was only for a day.

The children, who were barred two years ago when they declined to salute the flag because of religious objections, went to the opening day's session of the Oxon Hill Consolidated School, but were told by Principal Thomas Gwynn, jr., they could not return without permission from Boykin Watson, president of the school board, or Nicholas Orem, superintendent.

For a while the children were taught at their home through the help of friends.

"Now," Ludke said, "I have no facilities to teach them at home."

Juvenile Sharpshooters Score Hits at Temple Center Festival

Straus Sees Big Housing Boom After U. S. Tour

Administrator Says Reason Is Building of New Low-Rent Houses.

America is on the eve of the biggest housing boom in history, Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, predicted last night on his return from a trip across the country.

One large aspect will be destruction of slums and construction of new low-rent houses, he said in announcing that approval of loan contracts with local communities for such work had passed the $200,000,000 mark.

Contracts totaling $48,279,000 to defray 90 per cent of the $53,662,000 estimated cost of 30 projects in 18 cities were approved yesterday by President Roosevelt. This brought total of USHA loans to local housing authorities to $202,807,000 for 43 cities.

At the same time, he said that he had conferred with John Ihdler, executive officers of the local Alley Dwelling Authority, and expected early action on a $15,000,000 housing program for Washington.

Two Maryland cities were among those for whom contracts were approved yesterday. Annapolis received a loan of $487,000 for construction of 100 family units to cost an estimated $582,000. Baltimore received its second loan, $4,975,000 for construction of 1,102 family dwelling units to cost an estimated $5,529,000. Baltimore previously received a loan of $16,616,000 for construction to cost an estimated $18,462,400.

Straus had returned Tuesday from a business trip across the counrty in which he visited 16 cities where local housing authorities are functioning. He was "enormously impressed" by work being done by the authorities and quality of men in charge of them, he said.

A few years ago in his travels he had found a decided indifference toward housing problems and in many cases denials that conditions required action. "Today," he said, "there is everywhere an eager interest in what can be done toward better city planning, elimination of slums and the rehousing of slum dwellers. That is also true of an interest in the stimulation of private building."

Commenting on the speed with which the USHA program has progressed since he took office last November he said the authority was now dealing with 198 local housing authorities. At the present rate of earmarkings and signing of contracts he expected the $800,000,000 available to be loaned out by Christmas.

Though willing to talk about housing he dodged questions about how he would vote in primaries by quipping: "If you were in China would you wear pigtails?"

Goldfish With Tails Like Veils Here to Replace Dead Ones

Eight fancy Japanese goldfish—the first of a new assortment to replace those that died last winter—arrived yesterday at the Bureau of Fisheries aquarium in the Department of Commerce Building.

The fish are from a Japanese hatchery at North Branch, N. J., and are tailored along true Nipponese lines, consisting mainly of multiple tails that suggest a bridal train and long filmy fins.

Fred G. Orsinger, director of the aquarium, said later arrivals would include a number of Chinese specimens and perhaps a few on which cross-breeders have inflicted both Japanese and Chinese characteristics.

Orsinger said Chinese breeders seek to develop grotesque characteristics and multiple colors.

The aquarium will receive in the near future a number of Black Moor telescopes, shubunkins and others. Those received yesterday are calico fantails and gold fantails.

Sidewalk Picture Men Accused of False Pretenses

Four charges of false representation were placed against the manager of a group of sidewalk photographers yesterday.

Irving A. Stern, 21, of New York City, was ordered held under $2,000 bail by Assistant United States Attorney David A. Hart after a conference with Detective Lieut. Clement Cox.

A second man, Robert B. Siehl, 23, of 309 Fourth street southeast, a photographer, was charged with taking pictures without a license. He was arrested downtown Tuesday.

Capt. Ira E. Keck, acting chief of detectives, assigned Lieut. Cox to investigate the photographers after he received numerous letters of complaints from visitors.

Children Flee Nursery When Fire Breaks Out

Fire slightly damaged a day nursery at 1428 Euclid street yesterday, while 35 children were led to safety. The children, 4 to 6 years old, were herded outside by Mrs. Lillian Dinowitzer, nursery director, her husband, daughter and two employes.

The children were asleep when the blaze was discovered in an attic by Mrs. Dinowitzer. An upstairs room was damaged by the fire which firemen said apparently was caused by a short circuit.

Special Class Proposed for 'Slow' Pupils

Ballou Outlines Project to Experiment With 8th, 9th Grades.

An experiment which may mean solution of handling "slow-moving" pupils in District schools was outlined to the Board of Education yesterday in a report submitted by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou.

Special eighth and ninth grade classes will be organized at the Macfarland Junior High School for pupils whose work falls behind that of their classmates. Those attending the experimental classes will take all subjects under one teacher and will use special textbooks, Dr. Ballou said.

A proposal calling for extension of school services into high schools for crippled children was submitted to Dr. Ballou.

The plan, submited by Nelson Handback, president of the Alumni Association of the Weightman-Langdon School for crippled children, requested establishment of some plan to enable handicapped pupils to obtain advantages of the high school without interfering with the school program.

The superintendent's report on tuition rates, effevtive September 1, was approved by the board. Rates show an increase in each bracket with exception of senior high schools. Rates approved for the school year were:

Teachers colleges, $295.95; senior high schools, $110.45; junior high schools, $88.26; elementary schools, $61.53 vocational schools, $115.62; vacation schools, $4.41, and night schools, $7.10.

Total cost of general educational administration for the fiscal year ending June 30 was $90,445.85, or 71 cents per pupil, the report stated. Total enrollment was listed at 128,461.

Preliminary plans showing general sketches for construction of Bunker Hill School, an auditorium-gymnasium for the Whittier School, an auditorium-gymnasium for the Bancroft School, and an eight-room addition and auditorium-gymnasium for the Kingsman School were submitted by the municipal architect.

The plans will be sent back to the architects who will begin drawing working plans, it was said. The board followed up its action by granting Supt. Ballou blanket authority to approve plans submitted in the future on four construction projects for colored schools.

New Police Trial Board in D. C. To Be Indorsed

Commissioners to Approve Plan as Conceived by Hazen.

A newly constituted police trial board to replace the present setup of three police officials will be approved tomorrow by the District Commissioners, it was disclosed yesterday.

The new board will consist of an assistant corporation counsel to be designated by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal; James R. Lusby, District disbursing officer, and a police official holding the rank of captain or higher.

The plan has already been approved by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and adoption will follow tomorrow when the Board of Commissioners holds its regular meeting.

The change followed closely a recommendation by Corporation Counsel Seal that a new board hear the case of Police Privates John W. Nally and Robert M. Henry, who were ordered before the trial board in connection with the fatal shooting of Leroy Keys, colored war veteran, last March.

The police member on the board will be designated by Maj. Brown it was stated.

The Keys case, which probably will be the first major case heard by the new board, is scheduled for Tuesday.

16 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

"Record Breakers."

It is fairly well established by this time that the New York Yankees are a pretty good ball team. In fact, there is no argument on that point. For the third consecutive year they are making a run-away of the American League pennant race. With the Yankees 13 games out in front at this writing, the race is all over but the shouting.

POVICH.

We mean that literally. The shouting goes on apace. It is being done by the New York baseball writers who would have us know that the Yankees are not mere pennant winners—they are record breakers. Almost every succeeding day brings news that the Yankees have broken another record of some kind. The impression we gain is that the New York writing gentry will soon be digging up home plate or exhuming the pitcher's box in their frenzy to unearth the daily quota of records.

It wouldn't be so horrible except that most of these new records being set by the Yankees are phoney things, synthetic stuff that only overzealous figure filberts would even propose as new records. "Yankees Set New Record!" we read in the headlines and then let our glance fall to the fine type wondering what new, super-colossal feat the Yankees have accomplished.

Usually it's a terrific letdown. Four times last week we were informed that the Yankees had set new records and there wasn't an occasion when "So what?" would not have been an adequate reply. There wasn't a single record among 'em that was worthy of being called a record.

Even Gehrig, Eh?

First we learned that Lou Gehrig had set a record. It seems that when he crosed the plate for the 100th time this season he had broken a record despite the fact that nobody except the New York figure hounds was familiar with it. It seems that Gehrig thus became the first man to score 100 runs for 12 seasons in a row. Now, isn't that exciting?

But wait. In the same game, the old record-buster busted even yet another record. He drove in his 101st run of the season, thus becoming the first man in baseball history to drive in more than 100 runs 13 years in a row. Babe Ruth's old record went by the boards, we were informed. We'll lay 1,000 to 1 that nobody remembered that Ruth held that record, or, furthermore, that nobody cared.

Lest yon descending sun fall in the west before the Yankees could produce another record, we were advised the other day that they did create one. What was it this time? Why, when Tom Henrich hit his twenty-first home run of the season, it gave the Yankees five players each of whom had hit more than 20 home runs in the same season. That was going far afield up another record, but the New York folks were equal to it! And Ruffing the other day pitched his twentieth victory of the season. In any other city it would have been merely noted that Red Ruffing pitched his twentieth victory of the season, but not in New York. No indeedy. To the New York baseball men that was some kind of a record because Ruffing was the first man in the American League to pitch 20 wins this year.

It's No Honor!

To folks like ourselves who are more than slightly weary of these "Yankee records," Ruffing's is perhaps the most irksome of all. We do not attempt to detract from Ruffing's feat, because his skill as a pitcher is unquestioned. But to be the first pitcher to win 20 games is no particular honor if that pitcher is with the Yankees. If Buck Newsom, Oral Hildebrand or Dutch Leonard were with the Yankees they would have won 20 games long since!

The baseball books are filled with records that only the most imaginative figure hounds would take the trouble to set down anyway. Who cares, for example, whether there is a record for fewest times hitting into double plays during a season? Or whether Joe Dokes establishes a record for accepting the fewest chances during a season? Who cares except the New York people, who seem to care only if the Yankees are involved?

We can't understand how the Yankees overlooked another Yankee record established the other day when Frankie Crosetti was thrown out at first base. It broke all previous records for being thrown out by exactly 6⅞ inches, on a throw from third base. The previous record-holder was Hans Wagner who had been thrown out by 6⅞ inches only 42 times and he was in the league for 22 years.

Bucs Keep Going!

The Pittsburgh Pirates struck a potent blow for themselves yesterday when they slapped down the Cincinnati Reds, 7 to 1, in the first game of what was to be the "crucial series" for the National League pennant.

Pennants are won by knocking off the top challenger in these hand-to-hand series and when the Pirates came through with that convincing triumph they won a host of followers. If they were to collapse, yesterday was the day. But they got over the hump nicely.

Conversely, the Reds are fast demonstrating that they don't have what it takes to win the pennant this season. With nine games remaining against the Pirates and a chance to make up much ground, what did the Reds do on Tuesday but get themselves shut out by the lowly Cardinals with five hits.

Cubs' Outfielder Injured in Practice

The injury jinx, hounding the Cubs this year, struck another blow before yesterday's game. Joe Marty, who is pictured above, was carried from the field and given first aid after he collided with Pitcher Jack Russell. Marty will have an X-ray taken to determine the extent of his injuries.

Budge, Fearing Sore Throat, Sees Doctor; Title Play Today

Nation's Top Net Ace Says His Game Has Been Hurt; Stars to Meet at Forest Hills.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 7.—Don Budge, world's ranking amateur tennis player who opens the defense of his American title Friday, visited a specialist today to find out what was causing the sore throat that has been bothering him for the past six months.

While not considered serious enough to keep him out of the Nationals, the diagnosis showed the sore throat he incurred on an Australian tour last winter had never completely healed. A blood test was taken by the physician, but the results will not be known until Friday, a few hours before Budge takes the court in his opening match.

"There is no danger of withdrawing," said Budge. "The ailment is not serious, but it has been mighty annoying and I believe has affected my playing."

Budge has had a sore throat recurrently ever since the French championships in May. He was bothered by it at Wimbledon, Newport and Longwood as well as in the Davis Cup at Germantown last week-end.

Walter Pate, nonplaying captain of the Davis Cup team, believes it accounted for his poor showing in the Davis Cup doubles, which he and Gene Mako lost to the Australian combination of Adrian Quist and Jack Bromwich. Pate said Don was so ill after clinching the trophy by defeating Quist on Monday that he burst into tears.

"I'm not attempting to alibi Budge's inferior play in the Davis Cup matches," said Pate. "If we had lost to Australia nothing ever would have been said about his illness. Don told me he would rather have died on the court Monday than to have let his trouble be known."

National Tennis Play Starts Today.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—The national tennis championships start tomorrow on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club, at Forest Hills, with Bobby Riggs, Adrian Quist and Helen Hull Jacobs as the chief drawing cards for the opening day's program.

Miss Jacobs and Quist have been assigned places of honor in the stadium court. Berkeley Helen, seeking her fifth championship and seeded at the head of the list of domestic contenders, will open play at 11:45 a. m. (Eastern standard time) against Anne C. Harrison, of Ruxton, Md. Quist, at 12:30 p. m., will meet Frank Broida, of Pittsburgh.

Riggs, on the other hand, has been assigned to a field court for his match at 1 p. m. with Peter Lauck, of Wynnewood, Pa. The chunky young Chicagoan has drawn the toughest of four tough quarters in the men's singles draw.

English Golf Team Off to Curtis Lead

Page-Orcutt, Vare-Berg Teams Are Beaten in Cup Play.

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, Mass., Sept. 7. The Curtis Cup, emblematic of British-American women's golf supremacy, today appeared destined to follow the Walker Cup, its male counterpart, over the ocean when the invading team gained 2½ out of a possible 3 points in the opening Scotch foursome play on the rain-swept Essex ounty Club course.

Two victories and a draw in tomorrow's six singles matches would give the British team its first triumph since the international competition, inspired by the Misses Margaret and Harriot Curtis, both former national titlists and Essex County Club members, was inaugurated at Wentworth, England, in 1932. The best the British women have done in the three previous biennial cup matches was a 4½-4½ draw at Gleneagles, Scotland, two years ago.

Page-Orcutt Lose.

Mrs. Andrew Holm, of Scotland, the present British titlist, and Ciarrie Tiernan, 21-year-old Irish beauty, combined to give the invaders their initial victory by defeating Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, the current national champion, and Maureen Orcutt, the Englewood (N. J.) star, who has played in every Curtis Cup affair, 2-up.

The Anglo-Scotch combination of Elsie Corlett and Jessie Anderson, both seasoned Curtis Cup campaigners, turned in the second British victory, a one-hole decision over Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, the seven-time national titlist, and Patty Berg, youthful Minneapolis sensation.

Rally Doesn't Help.

Mrs. Vare and Miss Berg lost four of the first five holes and halved the next four as the British stars went out in 38, two under women's par. The home team, however, rallied at the turn and pulled even at the seventeenth. A birdie 4 on the home hole beat them, an 8-foot putt by Miss Anderson. Mrs. Vare had missed a half by running up her 4-footer to the lip of the cup.

The final alternate shot match of the day, between Mrs. J. B. Walker and Phyllis Wade, of Great Britain and Marion Miley, of Cincinnati, and Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., ended all-even. The American girls dropped a two-hole lead by three-putting the seventeenth and blowing up on the eighteenth, where they took eight strokes to reach the green.

The pairings for tomorrow's singles were Mrs. Holm and Mrs. Page, Miss Anderson and Miss Berg, Miss Corlett and Miss Miley, Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Vare, Miss Tiernan and Miss Orcutt, and Nan Baird, of Scotland, and Charlotte Glutting, of West Orange, N. J.

Army Grid Ducats Ready

Applications Will Be Filled on Request.

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 7.—The Army Athletic Association has sent out almost 12,000 sets of football ticket application blanks for the 1938 season to nonmembers of the association, according to the graduate manager of athletics at the United States Military Academy, and intends to send out more to those who apply within a reasonable time.

Army will have six home games this year at West Point, only one of which will have an admission charge of more than $1.10. Fans desiring to see the Cadets in action here have their choice of games with the University of Wichita, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Columbia University, Boston University, University of Chattanooga, and Franklin and Marshall College. The admission charge for the game with Columbia will be $3.30; all others, $1.10.

The season opens on September 24, one week earlier than usual, with the University of Wichita, followed by Virginia Tech and Columbia University. Army will be away on October 15, when they meet Harvard at Cambridge, but will again be home on the 22d for the game with Boston University. Notre Dame will be played in New York City on October 29, and on November 5, Franklin and Marshall will be visitors at West Point. The University of Chattanooga will come here for the last home game of the season on November 12, after which Army will play Princeton, at Princeton, on the 19th, and the Navy at Philadelphia on the 26th.

Georgetown Squad Is at Full Strength For Gridiron Drills

With the Georgetown football squad at its full strength of 40 candidates after the arrival of the New Jersey contingent led by Fullback Jim Castiglia, Coach Jack Hagerty got down to serious business yesterday, pacing his boys through morning and afternoon workouts.

Believing his charges in better-than-average shape for this time of the season, Hagerty is minimizing calisthenics and yesterday devoted most of the practice hours to passing and kicking and play formations.

The Hoyas continue with their two-a-day drills at 9:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. until the opening of the school term, September 19, when single sessions will be resumed.

Some Hot Action at the Home Plate

Bosox Wallop Yanks, 11-4

Jimmy Foxx Steals the Show From Cronin.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Sept. 7.—It was Joe Cronin day at Fenway Park today, but Jimmy Foxx took the honors. The "double-X" clouted two homers and a double, drove in a total of eight runs, and was generally a one-man slugging show in the Red Sox's 14-to-4 victory over the New York Yankees.

FOXX.

The game was ended by a downpour of rain with the Yankees at bat in the sixth, but by that time it didn't make much difference. The Sox, backing up steady pitching by Joe Heving with a 12-hit attack, were so far in front and still going that the Yanks couldn't have caught up in 20 inning.s

The victory kept the Sox in a second-place tie with Cleveland in the American League, and cut the Yanks' first-place margin over these two clubs to 13 games.

Ruffing, the big leagues' only 20-game flinger, was obviously not in winning form right from the start. Two doubles, by Joe Vosmik and Joe ronin, produced a run in the first, to which the Sox added five more in the third and three more in the fourth before Big Red was belted to the showers, with his fifth defeat of the year.

Foxx's homers—his forty-first and forty-second of the season—came in consecutive innings, the third and fourth, each time with two mates on base. In the fifth, he stepped up with the bases loaded, but his range wasn't so good. He only smashed a two-base hit off the wall in left center. Two of the runners scored, but the third, Vosmik, was caught at the plate by Joe DiMaggio's fine peg from the outfield.

The Yanks got to Heving for two runs in the fourth, one of them on DiMaggio's twenty-ninth homer of the season, and had two runs in, and none out when the game ended in the sixth.

Not One Irishman Called "Mike."

Time was in Georgetown football history when the good Irish name of "Mike" reigned supreme. This year, however, although more than 60 per cent of the Hoya squad is of Gaelic descent, not a blarney one of 'em pricks up his ears when you yell, "Hey, Mike."

There is a "Mike" on the squad, though. His name is Michael C. Zinkevitch, an Austrian, who emigrated here after the war.

Mike is a good student and hopes to be a chemist, like his father. His southern drawl, he ascribes to his home town, Claremont, located in the southern part of New Hampshire. Mike is a candidate for a guard position.

Pirates Check Red Menace, Beat Cincinnati, 7-1, Behind Klinger

6-Hit Pitching Dose and Heavy Hitting by Waners and Rizzo Sink Losers Into Third Place.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Sept. 7.—The league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates dropped the Cincinnati Reds to third place today by their 7-to-1 triumph as the Chicago Cubs moved into second place by their victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cubs trail the Pirates by five games.

Bob Klinger pitched six-hit ball to send the Redlegs tumbling in the standings.

Only one Redleg got as far as third base—aside from Frank McCormick, who singled in the seventh, reached second on Johnny Rizzo's error and scored the Reds' lone run on Lombardi's one-base blow to center.

RIZZO.

The Pirates, led by Paul Waner with four-for-four, lost no time in getting to Paul Derringer. The big Kentucky righthander sought his twentieth victory of the year, but "Big Poison" Waner's first inning double, singles by Rizzo and Gus Suhr and Young's fly netted two runs and presaged his early retirement.

Suhr's triple to open the fifth was the signal, and Gene Schott took over. His fate was little better, as the Bucs got to him for a single to score the first-sacker and, in the eighth, Rizzo clouted his sixteenth home run of the year to score behind Paul Waner, who had singled.

Three double-plays to the same combination, Thevenow to Young to Suhr, cut down as many potential scoring threats by Bill McKechnie's men. The majority of Klinger's offerings were good for little more than easy infield chances, Paul Waner alone being credited with a putout in the outer pastures.

Harder Halts Tigers, 1 to 0

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 7.—Mel Harder's two-hit pitching performance today gave Cleveland's Indians their ninth straight victory and their second shutout over Detroit in two days. The score was 1 to 0.

HARDER.

Harder struck out five Tigers and walked three, and was in trouble only in the fourth inning when Detroit filled the bases with two out, on a single and two walks. Harder tossed out Billy Rogell for the third out.

George (Slicker) Coffman, pitching for Detroit, allowed the Indians but four hits. Two of them, with a stolen base in between, sent Roy Weatherly across the plate with the winning run in the eighth.

Man of the Month

Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month."

Taft Wright emerged as the stand-out performer among the Nats in yesterday's losing battle with the Athletics and to him goes the chief award of points in the Man of the Month contest.

To Wright, five points, because his homer produced the Nats' only earned run and because he also contributed a single.

To Sammy West, three points, because he hit safely twice in important stages of the game.

To Al Simmons, one point, because he contributed one of the Nats' six hits.

To Buddy Myer, one point, for the same reason.

Caster Lets Griffs Down With 6 Hits

Athletics Get Away to 3 Run Lead in Second and Stay in Front.

By Shirley Povich.

Joe Krakauskas, hero of a three-hit shutout over the Athletics last week, shut the Athletics out again yesterday—for one inning. Then it was a case of pitching and ducking for Krakauskas. The broad-beamed left hander retired in utter confusion at the end of seven innings and the Nats lost the ball game, 5 to 2.

WRIGHT.

The Nats lost the ball game chiefly because George Caster was there at Griffith Stadium. The A's knuckle-balling right-hander took complete charge after being presented with a 4-2 lead in the first three innings. The Nats could produce nothing but zeros against Caster in the last six innings, and, if full details are necessary, they made only two hits after the fourth.

Speed Deserts Him.

Not only that, but one of the Washington firm's runs was a gift affair, evolving from an error by Bill Werber. There was nothing tainted about that other Washington run, however. It was a well-tagged homer by Taft Wright which cleared the high wall in rightfield and clattered down U street.

Krakauskas' speed deserted him yesterday, as attested by the box score which reveals only three strikeouts to his credit. Apparently unawed by the prospect of facing the pitcher who limited them to three hits in their last engagement, the Athletics hauled off and made at least one hit in each of the seven innings Krakky was suffered to pitch.

Only because they were over-ambitious on the bases were the A's held to five runs. In the second inning, Wally Moses attempted to score from first on a mere single by Werber and Myer's relay to Ferrell cut him down at the plate. In the ninth, Sam Chapman was not content with swatting a triple to the centerfield corner and he, too, was the victim of a Myer throw to the plate.

Krakauskas encouraged the A's to take the lead in the second inning when he walked the first two men to face him. Then he pitched a two-bagger to Johnny Lodigiani and the A's were in front, 2-0. They came up with a third run in the inning, a gift affair, when Buddy Lewis and Rick Ferrell collided under Werber's pop fly near the pitcher's box, Lodigiani scoring from second.

Werber Helps Nats.

Werber gave a run back to the Nats in the latter half of the inning. With two out, Myer walked and West singled to right. Myer moving to third on the blow and then moved home when Werber made a crude muff of Moses' throw to third.

The A's upped their lead to 4-1 almost immediately, when Lodigiani and Johnson whacked out a pair of singles against Krakky and then the Nats made it 4-2. That run evolved from Wright's home run blast that started the third inning.

Wright's hit was the last Washington safety for some time. In fact, the Nats were hitless until Wright produced a futile single in the eighth. Add Al Simmons' single in the ninth and you have the sum total of the Washington hits.

After muffing scoring chances in the fourth, fifth and sixth, the Athletics tacked on an entirely superfluous run in the seventh. Chapman, who was the leader of the 13-hit attack, pounded a double into centerfield, went to third when Krakky slipped and fell in fielding Finney's weak tap, and was fetched home by Newsome who hoisted a fly to Simmons.

Krakauskas was withdrawn for a pinch hitter in the seventh and Harry Kelly got the job in the last two innings, in which nothing of consequence happened.

Wilson Calls Practice.

All candidates for the Woodrow Wilson High football squad are requested to appear in uniform for the first practice this morning at 8:30 on the school field.

Giants Defeat All-Stars, 6 to 0, on Cuff's 2 Field Goals

Pros Victors On 42-Yard Place-Kicks

Ground Attack of N. Y. Bogs Down; Drive of Collegians Fails.

By Jesse Abramson.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 7.—Two gargantuan field goals on placement kicks by Ward Cuff from the 43 and 42 yard lines gave the New York Giants a 6-to-0 victory over the 1938 Eastern College All-Stars in the third annual Tribune fresh air funds football production that inaugurated the New York season under the bright lights of the Polo Grounds last night.

An enthusiastic crowd of 40,382, headed by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, which set an attendance record for the series, sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune, watched a hard-hitting conflict that was outstanding for the defensive robustness of the two well drilled and well trained elevens and the midseason caliber of the play.

The latest batch of the All-Stars, picked from the class of 1938 from 15 Eastern colleges, with "two strikes" against them figuratievly and literally, went down swinging for the third strike in their annual challenge against the young, yet experienced, Giant organization. The Giants won for the third straight year, unable to score a touchdown for the first time in the series.

Star Defense Potent.

The All-Stars, more potent on defense as they figured to be, yielded ground grudgingly against the stabbing runs of Tuffy Leemans and Hank Soar and the brilliant pitching of veteran Ed Danowski. With such stalwarts in and out of the line as Alexander Wojciechowicz and Ed Franco, from Fordham; Tony Matisi, Frank Souchak and John Michelson, from mighty Pitt; Dave Colwell, of Yale, and Joe Drulis, of Temple, the All-Stars made three magnificent goal-line stands inside the 10-yard line in the second and fourth quarters.

But the sharp-shooting right foot of Ward Cuff, one-year professional veteran, carried the night for the embattled Giants, fighting for the dear old prestige of the National Professional Football League whose 1937 champion, the Washington Redskins, has been taking it on the chin recently in Chicago and points West.

The Giants were stopped on the All-Stars 2-yard line early in the second quarter on their first raid into enemy territory. They took Colwell's boot from the end zone. They failed to make any headway. And so Ward Cuff, from Marquette, the one-time intercollegiate javelin champion, stepped back to the 43-yard line, with Danowski holding the ball, and blasted his foot into the black-striped yellow ball. He kicked from a slight angle to the left of the goal posts. The ball went for a ride, high, wide and handsome through the humid night air. It sailed far above the cross-bar and posts—a 60-yard jaunt from Cuff's foot until it landed well beyond the end zone.

Was it good? The crowd waited in suspense. The referee, Tom Thorp, was a long time in throwing up his arms, perhaps he was waiting for the confirming signal from his associates standing behind the goal posts.

Souchak Misses Two.

That 3-0 lead, which the Giants threatened to increase at the end of the half and the beginning of the fourth period, was doubled early in the last quarter. Handsome Mr. Cuff attended to the honors again. Lee Shaffer and Will Walls had just dropped a couple of passes from Danowski and Leemans on or close to the goal line. And so Cuff took aim from the 42-yard line, this time shooting for the west goal posts. Danowski held the ball again, and Cuff just cleared the cross bar for his second field goal.

Two field goals in two tries from 43 and 42 yards. That is par for the course for Cuff. He kicked two in his first professional league season last year, the longest from 42 yards.

The Giants made their two field goal tries good; the All-Stars, with Souchak, of Pitt, kicking, missed two in the first period from much closer, from 31 and 25 yards (the goal posts were on the goal line for this game) and that spelled the difference between the two teams with the Giants having the advantage in virtually all phases of the game, including the statistics chart. The Giants made six first downs to the All-Stars' four (no one was running wild last night). The Giants completed 10 of 24 passes, Danowski throwing all the completed ones in 20 tries for 66 yards, the All-Stars with Andy Stopper from Villanova, the chief threat, completed only 6 of 15 for 54 yards, but the Giants intercepted three, one of the interceptions leading up to Cuff's first field goal. The rushing gains were inconsequential, the Giants making 62 yards, which was tremendous considering the All-Stars made only 7 all night.

Leemans Stopped After One-Yard Gain

Johnny Michelosen broke through to tackle him. In center foreground is Frank Souchak, former Pitt end (No. 23).

Down In Front ..... With Richards Vidmer

New York, Sept. 7.—The tall, handsome young fellow with the healthy glow on his cheeks, swung his club and peered through his glasses as the ball sped through the air and came to rest far down the fairway.

"Humm," grunted Hal Sims, who had been waiting his turn and looking on with a speculative eye. "Hmm. Better than a green hand."

"Maybe that's beginner's luck," suggested the young man. "This isn't my game, you know."

VIDMER.

And everyone realized that it wasn't. Yet as the match progressed, Grantland Rice, George Morse, Frank Craven, Bud Kelland, Henry McLemore, Carl Mueller, Doc Newman and the rest of the crowd were willing to agree with Hal's original observation, George Lott was better than a green hand indeed, even though he was playing golf instead of tennis.

But as the gang wandered over Deepdale's fairways and, I regret to add, some of them struggled through Deepdale's rough, they talked to George about the game at which he became famous. And mostof the questions were asked with the idea of "after Budge—what?"

It was taken for granted that Budge, champion of the world, defender of the Davis Cup and master of the amateurs, would turn professional after the national championships. Who was coming along to take his place?

"Well, if Don turns pro—and I don't see why he shouldn't," Lott explained, hitting a crisp nibble shot to the green, "Jack Bromwich, of Australia, certainly would seem to be the logical successor as the No. 1 amateur in the world. I can't think of anyone who is around that could beat him."

Many Challengers.

"Who would be America's No. 1?"

"Riggs. At least for the present. But I don't think Riggs will be able to take care of the Davis Cup as Budge has done. The challenge from several other nations would be too much for him."

"You mean Australia?"

"Well, yes. Bromwich and Quist make a strong combination. Stronger than the United States can muster without Budge. But Australia isn't the only threat. There's Germany. They have Henkel and Metaxa and Von Cramme——"

"What about Von Cramm?" interrupted Fontaine Fox, getting down off the Toonerville Trolley for the moment.

"He's indisposed at the moment of course, but from what I hear he will be free to play again after the first of the year," smiled Lott. "I also understand that they already have an idea of reinstating him socially. From what I hear the King of Sweden—you know he's quite a tennis enthusiast—is going to invite the baron to play as his partner in the tournaments on the Riviera this winter. And of course, after he has played with the King, he will have to be accepted in the best tennis cireles."

Recruiting Fields.

"How about Yugoslavia? Aren't they going places?" asked Pete McCoy, the barrister. "I understand that this Puncec is a real topnotcher."

Lott wrinkled up his nose, selected a spoon from his bag and sent the ball flying home before he answered that one.

"They're all right," he said, "but only on hard courts. They don't play any too well on turf. And I don't think they ever will."

"Anyway, they may be playing for Germany too," observed McLemore. "You know, I think Hitler must be quite a tennis enthusiast. He lost Von Cramm so he went in and took over Austria. That gave him George von Metaxa, and now with Puncec coming along, he has an eye on Yugoslavia."

"Czechoslovakia," he was corrected by Mr. Kelland.

"Well, what's the difference?" asked Henry. "Maybe Adolf has become slightly confused himself."

"Whom can you see coming up to take Budge's place in this country?" Frank Craven, the man from our town, asked.

"Kramer is the best," said Lott without hesitation. "He's only 15 or 16 years old but he looks a lot like Vines. Plays a lot like Vines, too. He may be a couple of years away from international competition, but of all the youngsters I've seen, he seems to have the most promise."

Graeme Cracker Wins John M. Dennis Race at Timonium Track

Jadaan Gets Second Spot In Fast Dash

Brainchild Finishes in Third Place; Jockey Injured in Fall.

Timonium Fair Grounds, Md., Sept. 7.—The John M. Dennis Handicap, 6½-furlong feature, run in a light rain, over a fast track, found Mrs. W. Strawbridge's Graeme Cracker winning in 1:21 3/5.

In scoring, Graeme Cracker bothered Ed Colvin's Brainchild, the early pacemaker, as the field swung out of the backstretch. Graeme Cracker then went on to a driving victory over L. L. Westmoreland's Jadaan, with Brainchild third. The last named rider lodged a claim of foul against the winner, which was disallowed.

The feature was run in memory of the late president of the Maryland State Fair and Agricultural Society, which conducts this meeting.

Jockey Hurt in Fall.

During the early part of the Dennis Handicap, Chief Hollis fell with Jockey Buddy Root suffering bruises about his body. Root canceled his remaining mounts for the day.

Starter Ira Gregory uncorked one of his infrequent bad starts in the day's 4½-furlong opener and it enable Vendor's Lien, owned by G. G. Waugh, jr., of Virginia, to win. The gelding paid $14. T. Beatty Brown's Welsh Star, who set the early pace, and Vendor's Lien were the only ones to get away well. The start proved disastrous for Accidental, owned by H. M. Simpson, of Washington, the favorite, who eventually wound up third.

Double Pays $74.90.

The Rodgers Forge Steeplechase, 2 miles over 16 fences, found John Bosley's Edgemont winning in 4 minutes flat, to pay $7.70. Edgemont was laying third at the 1½-mile mark. When Louis C. Leith's Carls Choice carried J. Fred Adams, jr.'s Briar Blue very wide, Edgemont shot into the lead, to win driving.

The daily double combination of Vendor's Lien and Edgemont paid $74.90.

The Holly Beach Farm Purse, 6½-furlong secondary feature, saw Claude Feltner's Idyllic win in 1:21 2-5. She paid $6.90. The filly chased Ruth Lerner, pacemaker, well into the home stretch and came on to a head victory. It was her sixth score in 21 starts this year.

Marylanders got their first taste of flood-light racing in the day's eighth and final race, when it became so dark that seven huge lights were focused on the homestretch part of the track.

The race, run in a driving rain and over a sloppy track, saw Irish Vote, owned by O. Nader, of Washington, lead throughout. He won by seven lengths to pay $5.80.

The mile and one-sixteenth of the seventh race proved merely a workout for Mrs. M. Watts' Ladogan. The gelding took command at the "off bell" and won as Jockey Wade Snyder desired. He paid $5.30.

Golf Pros Card 10-Event Fall Schedule

Woodmont Women's Team Is Defeated

Earl Skinker Wins Columbia Club Junior Championship Over Solon Kemon; Defeats Thompson in Semifinals, 5 and 4.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A fall schedule of six pro-amateurs, the District Open, a pro-lady and Sunday exhibition match was announced yesterday by the tournament committee of the District golf professionals, Wiffy Cox, Congressional; George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, and Gene Larkin, Woodmont, secretary.

The top event on the card is the 72-hole District Open Championship, with dates set for October 6-7 at Washington Golf and Country Club. The host club will boost the purse $100, while the expected 50 entries at $5 per man will boost the total prize around the $350 mark.

COX.

The pro-amateurs and pro-lady tournaments will all be with one partner, played from scratch, and with a $5 per person entry fee, or $10 per team. The eliminating of the handicaps plus the boosted entrance fee, making a worthwhile top prize, has been advocated for some time. Although the card was drawn up for the local mentors, any P. G. A. member desiring to play in the affairs will be eligible.

Pro-Ams Are Set.

A pro-amateur tourney at Washington Golf and Country Club September 19, replacing the annual pro vs. amateur affair, is the initial event, while Tommy Doerer's invitation pro-am at East Potomac October 3 is second. The latter affair is expected to draw the top pros between Philadelphia and Richmond.

The Open is the third event, while a shot-making exhibition is on the program for the night of October 9 at Leo Walper's driving range on the East-West highway.

Wiffy Cox will play host to a proam October 10 at Congressional, while on the fourteenth a prolady tourney is carded at Beaver Dam. A Sunday exhibition match at Capital Club, October 16, may conflict with the proposed Washington vs. Virginia pros team match, and it will be postponed should plans for the latter go through. It will be settled this week-end.

Other Events Carded.

George Diffenbaugh will hold a proamateur at Kenwood the following day, October 17, with Al Treder host at Manor the next Monday, October 24 and a pro-am at Woodmont October 31 concluding the attractive card.

Any clubs desiring the Sunday matches or with a proposed tournament in mind should contact Gene Larkin at Woodmont, for dates, and to avoid any conflict in the schedule.

Larkin will accept entries for the District Open, at Woodmont. The entrance fee will be payed on the first tee on the first day of the championship at Washington.

Earl Skinker Wins Columbia Junior Title.

Earl Ekinker, young Wilson High ace, won the Columbia Country Club junior championship yesterday after a pair of impressive victories over Medalist Jim Thompson and Solon Kemon. He succeeds Buddy Pope as champion.

Skinker, protege of Pro Fred McLeod, shot one under par golf as he won over Thompson, finalist in the District schoolboy championship, in the morning semi-finals by a 5-and-4 margin and, although he was a few strokes higher in the afternoon, he was not extended in defeating Kemon 4 and 3.

Joe Barse won the second flight and Owen Williams the third, while Ben Hartig captured the first flight consolation.

Championship Flight.

Earl Skinker defeated Jimmy Thompson, 5 and 4; Solon Kemon defeated Fred Rita, 4 and 3.

Skinker defeated Kemon, 4 and 3.

Second Flight.

Joe Barse defeated George Rita, 4 and 3; Charles Perry defeated Chris Riner, 4 and 3.

Barse defeated Perry, 2 and 1.

Third Flight.

Owen Williams defeated Danny Walser, 4 and 2; Gene Gott defeated Jimmy Crowley, 2 and 1.

Williams defeated Gott, 4 and 3.

Consolations.

First flight—Ben Hartig defeated Charles Stockell, 4 and 3; Pete Wilson drew bye. Hartig defeated Wilson, 5 and 3.

Second flight finals—Frank White defeated Nelson Woodson, 2 and 1.

Third flight finals—Griffin Holland defeated Tell Wilson, 3 and 7.

Suburban Club Team Wins at Woodmont.

A visiting women's team from the Suburban Club in Pikesville defeated the host Woodmont links-women over the Bethesda course, 6½ to 5½, in which Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith and Mrs. Jack Schulman, No. 1 team of the locals, featured the match with a 2½ to ½ point victory over Mrs. Jerome Sloman and Mrs. Bert Friedman.

It was the first time in the inter-club rivalry that Mrs. Sloman and her partner had been defeated by the Woodmont top duo, and it took a best ball 81 by Mrs. Goldsmith and Mrs. Shulman to turn the trick. Mrs. Sloman was finalist in the Maryland State championship last spring.

Mrs. Henry Goodman and Mrs. T. D. Peyser, Woodmont, defeated Mrs. Allan Wirtzberger and Mrs. George Hutzler, Suburban, 2 points to 1, to give Woodmont a 4½ to 1½ lead.

The Nos. 3 and 4 teams from Suburban each defeated the Woodmont representatives by 2½ to ½ margins, however, to win the match by the single point. Mrs. Herbert Burgunder and Mrs. Lenore Strauss defeated Mrs. Gil Hahn and Mrs. L. H. Harris, while Mrs. Henry Miller and Mrs. Joseph Beckley, of the Baltimoreaons won over Mrs. A. H. Steinem and Mrs. Victor Zeve. It was the second victory of the year for the Suburban team over Woodmont.

BEAVER DAM.

Mrs. C. W. Buck, Mrs. R. C. Mitchell, Mrs. Florence Godfrey and Mrs. George Luce were winners in the weekly Ladies Day tournament at Beaver Dam yesterday.

WASHINGTON.

Lafayette Franklin, jr., succeeded Cliff Gruver as Washington Golf and Country Club junior champion with a round of 85 that was low in the field of four players. Gruver was second.

Washington Post Cup Entries May Set Mark

Entries to date point to a record breaking total in The Washington Post Women's Match Play championship, that starts Monday with an 18-hole qualifying round over the Manor Club course. Mrs. Robert L. Lacey is accepting entries at Cleveland 3939, until 1 p. m. tomorrow.

The 32 low net scores on Monday will qualify for the match play rounds that begin Tuesday and continue through the finals on Saturday. A new champion will be crowned as none of the five former winners will play in the week-long event.

Headline Mat Program Tonight

BABE MURPHY. DOLLY DALTON.

Dolly Dalton and Babe Murphy Headline Tonight's Mat Card

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Producer Joe Turner's own version of "The Women" will be presented tonight at his W street playhouse where four fugitives from housework tangle in a pair of cofeatured bouts. The curtain rises promptly at 8:30 o'clock.

Dolly Dalton, who made her debut here two weeks ago, meets Billy DeWitt, and Babe Murphy squares off with Jean Rogers.

But while the ladies have been assigned top billing there is a minor item involving Ernie Dusek and Hans Steinke, which should appease the fans' appetite for a good evening of roughhouse. Both men have large followings hereabouts, although it seems that the hope of seeing one or both pinned is the magnet that lures 'em through the turnstiles.

This is the first case on record where so much feminine talent has been used at one sitting in the whacky wrestling business and it is difficult to predict the outcome. Ther have been instances of two ladies clawing one another for the public's edification, and of one lady perched outside the ropes screaming encouragement to her hubby, but never, never four of the species on the same program—in or out of the ring.

Both matches undoubtedly will be of the "shooting" variety because the industry long ago discovered the impossibility of getting the good dames to work together. Proposals that one let the other win usually drew the retort: "What, me take a dive to that fuzzy-hair, painted-up scarecrow? Not on your life. Why don't she stand on her own feet—do her bunions hurt too much? If anybody loses it's going to be that flat-face flossy, and you can run right back and tell her what I said."

All of the ladies have trained diligently for the scuffles. Miss Dalton completed preparations yesterday afternoon with a brisk walk to the dining table, after which she spent 20 minutes at the manicurist's. Billy Dewitt had a facial and Miss Babe Murphy a fingerwave. Jean Rogers merely yawned and asked, "Don't you just adore Gable?"

The Steinke-Dusek go may develop into a first class brawl for Ernest has dropped all pretense at being a goody-goody and reverted to the old, familar business of thumbing, punching, etc., etc. Steinke, of course, fouls just enough to arouse the customers from their lethargy. Both men have large followings, but the magnet that lures 'em through the turnstiles is the hope of seeing one or both pinned.

Three other bouts are on the card.

Archibald, Dupre Bout Title Fray

Col. Miller Urges N.B.A. to Recognize Victor as Champion.

By Jack Munhall.

That Monday night's Archibald-Dupre bout will be Washington's second world's featherweight title fight in history virtually was assured last night when Lieut. Col. Harvey Miller, secretary of the National Boxing Commission, announced he would recommend at that body's September 14 meeting that Henry Armstrong be shorn of his featherweight championship.

MILLER.

Miller's announcement that Armstrong will be asked to abdicate for failing to defend his 126-pound laurels within six months—a N. B. A. regulation—is tantamount to declaring Archibald featherweight champion. The N. B. A. usually follows the will of its secretary and two other influential boxing powers—the Illinois and New York State commissions have already designated Archibald the No. 1 challenger.

Then, too, Miller has said he would seek the N. B. A.'s recognition of the Archibald-Dupre winner as No. 1 featherweight. In the wake of that announcement by Miller came a dispatch from the California board that it, too, would recognize either Dupre or Archibald as titleholder.

Rodak to Be No. 2.

Along the local cauliflower lane last night some seemed to think that Miller's recommendation carried with it an unwritten order for a bout between Monday's victor and Leo Rodak, the N. B. A.'s No. 1 challenger in the last ratings, for the official world championship.

Miller's recommendation for the first 10 in the featherweight division follows:

No. 1—Winner Archibald-Dupre.
No. 2—Leo Rodak.
No. 3—Jackie Wilson.
No. 4—Freddie Miller.
No. 5—Loser of Archibald-Dupre.
No. 6—Chalky Wright.
No. 7—Al Reid.
No. 8—Mike Belloise.
No. 9—Johnny Hutchinson.
No. 10—Petey Scalzo.

However, a glance at the recent records of Rodak, Wilson and Miller, give added impetus to the movement to make the Archibald-Dupre bout Washington's first title fight since Petey Sarron upset Freddie Miller at Griffith Stadium in 1934.

Rodak has dropped his last three starts, Wilson has been beaten twice in a row and Miller has been inactive.

Miller Backs Montana.

The possibility of Armstrong defending his crown before the alloted six months expires is improbable. The dusky windmill is signed for a welterweight championship bout with Ceferino Garcia at Madison Square Garden in early November and he could scarcely make weight for Garcia if he first pared down to 126 for a featherweight challenger.

Col. Miller also will recommend at the September 14 meeting that Small Montana, who meets Aurelien La Mothe on the police show card here October 3, be declared the flyweight champion of the world.

The title was vacated when Benny Lynch came in over the weight limit against Jackie Jurich recently. Lynch knocked out Jurich.

Miller's recommendations for the first 10 flyweights follow:

No. 1—Small Montana.
No. 2—Tut Whalley.
No. 3—Tiny Bostock.
No. 4—Aurelein La Mothe.
No. 5—Piera Louis.
No. 6—Jim McStravick.
No. 7—Pierce Ellis.
No. 8—Paddy Ryan.
No. 9—Valentine Angelmann.
No. 10—Mickey O'Neill.

Redskin Tickets.

A block of tickets for Washington supporters of the Redskins for Sunday's opening game at Philedelphia are being held at Redskin headquarters here. They may be obtained together with tickets for the special train at the Redskin office.

U. S. Officials to See N. Y. Debut of Jai Alai.

Two high State Department officials will go to New York tomorrow to attend the introduction of the game of jai alai there tomorrow night at the Hippodrome.

The officials, Laurence Duggan, chief of the American Republics division and Ellis O. Briggs, Assistant chief were invited to attend the inaugural games by the Cuba-American Chamber of Commerce of New York.

The game has long been popular in Cuba, Spain, Mexico, Venezuela and other Latin American Republics but has never been exhibited in New York.

Cuban Ambassador Pedro Martines Frags, it was unofficially understood here, would speak at the opening ceremonies.

Budge

nor two-fisted John Bromwich, of Australia, boomed since the Davis Cup challenge round as his likeliest successor, will complete tomorrow, when the program calls for completion of first-round matches in men's singles and upper-half first-round matches in women's.

The top-seeded United States and foreign entrants drew first-round byes and will make their bows on Friday, Budge against Welby Van Horn, of Los Angeles, and Bromwich against August Canzenmuller, of Seacliff, Mass.

Two of the first day's most promising matches will be played on the stadium court after the Quist-Broida match. At 1:30 Frank Kovacs, young California giant, who is seeded sixth, will meet E. J. Filby, promising Briton, and at 3 p. m. Don McNeill, United States indoor champion, will tackle Bernard Destremeau, of France, fourth ranking foreigner.

On the adjoining grandstand court Hal Surface, of Kansas City, seventh in United States ranking but unseeded, will face Jacques Brugnon, popular French veteran; Helen Pedersen, of Stanford, Conn., seeded seventh, will play Virginia Wolfenden, of Berkeley, Calif.; Joe Hunt, U. S. Davis Cup "spare" who is seeded third, will meet Tamio Abe, Japanese cup player, and Nancye Wynne, hard-hitting Australian newcomer who is seeded fourth, will play Mrs. William Freisenbruch, of Bermuda.

Remember a year ago today? . . . The Nats, with Almada making six hits in 11 tries, walloped the Boston Red Sox in both ends of a double-header, 11-5 5-4 . . . Fred Sington and Buddy Lewis homered in the first contest . . . Cecil Travis was leading all Nat hitters with a mark of .349, same as he had before yesterday's game . . . The Big Six of the majors was composed of Ducky Medwick, .384; Charley Gehringer, .382; P. Waner, .369; Lou Gehrig, .368; Gabby Hartnett, .363 and Joe DiMaggio, .357 . . . Slingin' Sammy Baugh came to Washington, wrangled with George Marshall for about 20 minutes and ended up signing a Redskin contract at a reputed salary of $6,500 . . . The Yankees (Ho, hum!) were riding an eleven-game lead in the American League while their poor cousins, the Giants, were busy fighting off the Cubs, only two games in arrears . . .

BUDDY LEWIS.

The Cubs purchased Carl Reynolds, former Nat outfielder from Minneapolis for immediate delivery . . . Thirty-eight candidates for the Georgetown football squad opened practice at Old Point Comfort and a great season was predicted for the Hoyas . . . Bill Terry signed a new five-year contract, calling for $40,000 per annum, and predicted a pennant for the Giants . . . Helen Jacobs, Frankie Parker and Don Budge reached their respective quarter-final rounds in the national singles play at Forest Hills . . . Andy Walker made an ace on the ninth hole at Congressional . . . On the eve of Navy's first practice, Coach Hank Hardwick announced the Middies would use a concensus of grid systems during the coming season . . .

George Case, Trenton rookie, who had demanded in vain a $1,000 bonus for signing with Washington, changed his mind and phoned Clark Griffith that he would accept a job with the Nats . . . 15-year-old Jim Thompson, House page, surprised by shooting a 78 for medal honors in the Columbia junior links tournament . . . Gov. Robert E. Quinn of Rhode Island announced there would be no "compromise" in the State Racing Association's battle to oust Walter O'Hara from the managing directorship of the Narragansett racing track . . .

Wheat Prices Advance With Securities Rise

Added Stimulus Given by Upward Trend at Winnipeg.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—Largely in response to sudden upturns of the New York stock market, Chicago wheat prices late today substituted about a cent gain for earlier equal losses.

Chicago traders ignored the circumstance that the jumps of securities were attributed to reports the Sudeten Germans had made a tentative acceptance of proposals for a basis of negotiations with Czechoslovakia, and that peace chances appeared better. A notable late upward trend of the Winnipeg wheat market served as an additional stimulus here.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ¼-⅞ above yesterday's finish, September 61-61⅛, December 62½-62⅝. Corn ½-¾ up, September 50⅝-50¾, December 48⅝-48¾. Oats ¼ advanced, Rye showing ⅝-¾ bulge, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 17 cents climb.

Cotton Rallies; December 8.11

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—Cotton rallied today as the markets viewed the European situation more hopefully and southern hedge selling let up. December advanced from 8.02 to 8.18 before meeting enough profit taking to cause late partial reactions and closed at 8.11, with final prices 8 to 11 points net higher.

The market opened unchanged to 2 points higher with traders marking time in advance of tomorrow's Government cotton crop estimate. There was enough trade price fixing and scattered outside buying attracted by the relatively cheap prices to impart steadiness. Contracts were scare as the recent Southern selling let up and prices responded to local covering.

Report of Peace Talk Basis Acceptance by Sudetens Responsible for Securities Advance.

New York, Sept. 7.—The report that the Sudeten leaders had accepted Czechoslovakian proposals as a basis of negotiation turned a dull and uninteresting session of the stock market into a bullish demonstration of some magnitude today. Later news from the foreign front was not as promising, for the Sudeten party broke off negotiations with the Czech government following reports that three Sudeten deputies had been assaulted by Czech police.

So, when the day closed the outlook was as dark as ever, but up to 3 o'clock, when the exchange closes, there was some basis for the hope that the troublesome situation between Germany and Czechoslovakia will be settled without resort to arms.

The bit of good news, coming in midafternoon, turned the tide in favor of the bullish forces. Up to that time all that could be said about the stock exchange was that it was open for business. But then prices turned upward sharply and there was a rush of transactions on the big board. At one time the ticker was two minutes late in reporting quotations, and while business quieted down after the first rush there was another good wave of buying just before the close.

Steels and Motors Lead.

The result was a net advance of 0.56-point in the composite average of stocks. This carried the general market to a level slightly higher than its best average last Saturday, so that the list made a new high for the current move. Steels, motors and metals led the upturn and gains of from 1 to 3 points were scored by a large number of the speculative leaders.

Motors and accessory issues stood out in the afternoon recovery. General Motors again was the day's most active stock and closed up 1⅝ while Chrysler added 2⅛. Second most active was United States Rubber, up 1⅝, and Steel, plus 1⅞. Electric Auto-Lite, in the accessory division, gathered a following and gained 2 points while Goodyear was up 1⅛.

Bendix led the aviation division while National Gypsum and Flintkote stood out in the building section, the last named gaining a point, as did Johns Manville. Paramount was the favorite among the amusement shares with Anaconda active in the metals.

The quick change from dullness and irregularity to activity and strength was accomplished by traders devoting their attention to the so-called pivotal leaders. Many of the more inactive issues were left behind in the sudden turnabout.

Among other leaders to show advances of a point or more were Atchison, Coast Line, Smelting, Bethlehem, Commonwealth & Southern preferred, Du Pont, Harvester, Jersey, Texas and Westinghouse. Allied Chemical, inactive member of the higher priced bracket, sold off 1¾. At the inactive post, Norwalk Tire preferred put on another special performance by climbing eight points, its recent strength reflecting the clearing up of arrears on this issue.

Among the commodities wheat rallied when stocks turned stronger, even though the rally in securities was based on better news from abroad. Early losses were turned into gains ranging from ¼ to ⅞ cent. New lows for the last six years were established before the recovery.

Bond List Improves.

Listed bonds reflected the general improvement in financial sentiment today. Small gains were the rule in United States Treasury issues and best rated corporation bonds. Czech government 8s and City of Prague 7½s moved up 3 to 4 points, on sinking fund buying, but most foreign bonds were improved in any event.

In the speculative issues of domestic origin gains were numerous but mostly fractional. Turnover was $4,420,000, an increase of $1,000,000 over the previous session.

Treasuries Inactive.

The Treasury bond list was watched closely, in view of the impending financing amendment. Rumors circulated all day as to terms of the fresh flotation, and a little buying was stimulated thereby. Gains of 1-32 to 7-32 point were recorded at the end. Rights due in December were in good demand. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were well maintained and in some instances moved up to previous highs.

Gains in Czech bonds could hardly be attributed to improvement in the international situation, for reports varied too greatly during the day to encourage activity. But the sinking fund continued to buy and pushed the bonds higher. French and Belgian bonds held well, and there was good demand for Scandinavians, Australians and Canadians. Default obligations attracted little interest.

Among the speculative carrier bonds a mild upward trend was in evidence, with a few issues off because of special situations. Moves were fractional in most instances, but a few gains of 1 to 2 points were recorded. Holding company bonds were dull, and local tractions irregular. The communications group did better, and convertibles likewise advanced.

Miami Commerce.

Miami, Sept. 7.—One result of the State Department's program to increase trade with Latin America has been to bring commercial, as well as resort, prominence to Miami, for according to customs figures, gross cargo tonnage cleared through this port has increased 500 per cent during the last five years.

Steel Pay Rolls $275,000,000 Under Year Ago

However, Hourly Wage Rates Remained Fairly Level.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 7.—The recession cost American steelworkers more than a quarter billion dollars during the first seven months of 1938, according to Steel Magazine, published yesterday. Steel industry pay rolls for the period were $275,000,000 less than in the corresponding period of 1937.

Reduction in pay rolls directly reflects the lower rate of steelworks operations, 31.5 per cent, from January through July this year, compared with 84 per cent in the similar period of 1937. This necessitated a shorter work week.

Hourly wage rates remained comparatively constant. Average rate of the first seven months this year was 82.7 cents, slightly higher than the average for the like period last year—81.6 cents.

Average work week in first seven months of 1937 ranged from 42.5 hours in February and March to 37.3 hours in July; in 1938, the range was from 22.9 hours in January to 26.7 hours in March.

Total number of employes gained steadily in 1937 from 547,997 in January to 593,906 in July. During 1938, employment has diminished from 475,000 in January to 424,400 in July.

Daily Oil Output Up in California

New York, Sept. 7.—Crude oil production in California during July averaged 659,884 barrels daily, 1.5 per cent below June but 6 per cent above the voluntary curtailment quota of 620,000 barrels set for the month by California producers, the current Business Outlook of the Wells Fargo Bank, San Francisco, reports daily production for the first 11 days of August rose to 662,730 barrels.

Medical Society In D. C. Faces Criminal Action

Anti-Trust Laws to Be Invoked to Determine if Profession Is 'Trade.'

The Justice Department will attempt to blaze a new legal trail in instituting criminal proceedings under the anti-trust statutes against District of Columbia Medical Society leaders, department officials admitted yesterday.

The department, officials pointed out, is confronted with the question whether the medical profession is to be regarded as a "trade" within the meaning of the Sherman anti-trust act.

At the same time, it was learned, the grand jury investigation of the society and the American Medical Association, based on complaints brought by Group Health Association, Inc., will be Nation-wide in scope.

If present plans materialize, grand jury hearings will start in about two weeks. Nevertheless, an additional delay of one or two weeks is possible, it was explained. Officials denied reports that arrangements had been made to launch the investigation September 19.

Department Not "Bluffing."

Preparations for the hearings are going forward as rapidly as possible, officials said. Subpenas for witnesses may be sent out this week. The department, it was made clear, is not "bluffing" and intends to go through with its inquiry.

Legal difficulties involved in the proceeding are discussed in a recent issue of the United States Law Week.

Explaining the department is moving into "an unchartered zone of action," the publication points out the Supreme Court has never ruled on the question whether the medical profession is a trade.

British courts in 1919 ruled that the British Medical Association had acted in restraint of trade in expelling members who joined or consulted with members of the staff of the Coventry Provident Dispensary, an organization existing for the same purpose as the Group Health Association.

If the department is successful in its action against the District Medical Society and the American Medical Association, the consequent enlargement of the definition of "trade" will put new teeth into the Sherman act, it was pointed out.

May Be Extended.

Although based on charges that the District Medical Society attempted to suppress Group Health Association, co-operative medical group set up by Government workers, the inquiry will embrace similar complaints from other cities, officers said.

"Organized medicine" has been accused of trying to break up the group health movement in Milwaukee and Los Angeles. It is highly probable that witnesses will be called from one or both of these cities.

To the extent that the investigation becomes Nation-wide, the American Medical Association will move into the spotlight. The department, it was learned, has received numerous complaints against the association, some of them accusing the organization of promoting certain manufacturers of pharmaceutical preparations to the exclusion of others.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

A CORRESPONDENT, whose name we are not at liberty to use, writes in:

"Did you ever stop to consider, when you are lauding unions, that you are risking that many employes will get more than they deserve? That the union system fosters a seniority basis and, hence, makes it impossible for the effective and energetic worker to advance except by endurance? That the ultimate result of such a policy might be an enormous and excessive drain on the productive part of America?"

We think these questions properly are open to answer by the unions. But it is to say that our "lauding" of the unions has been, in the main, on principle, and not always on their practice. In some of the practice, we think, there is much to be desired. But even the unions have never laid claim to perfection.

Generally, this can be said, beyond dispute an overwhelming majority of all legislation Congress has enacted for the betterment of Federal employe working conditions came at the behest of the unions and only after the unions had sweated, panted, badgered, annoyed and otherwise camped on the doorstep of Congress. If thousands of Federal employes are unaware of this, accept their benefits as pennies from heaven and clothe themselves in Lot's inhibition without a thought of looking back—then, that is something else the unions must bear and smile at through their tears.

Then, the unions—so far as we've observed—have not attempted to create a seniority system wherein individual merit would be strangled. They have consistently held that individual merit should be rewarded strictly on the basis of merit. A genius, or a person of extraordinary "productivity" might climb the ladder until the very roof would have to be cut away to give him headroom, so far as the unions are concerned. His climb might even be rejoiced in, so far as we know, and in time his very prominence and influence would tremendously qualify him for the chair of Grand Panjandrum in the union.

• • • •

BUT, FRANKLY, we don't think the Federal service is any place for a genius, or even too great a rugged individualist. The Federal service is a vast machine where every cog functions in co-ordination with all the other little cogs. All that is asked the employe is a day's work, performed according to regulation. In such an environment a dreamer would have no time for his dreams, and the high production man would simply find his work running so far ahead of everybody else as to upset the machine.

The genius and high production fellow should make their bids for high places in the service. If he is really a genius, the other geniuses in the Government's high places will be quick enough to recognize a fellow deep-thinker and take him to their bosoms at once. And there, in deep plush, he can dream his life away, happily not interfering with Uncle Sam's thousands of efficient clerks who do their work as it passes their stations, who do their work on time, machine-like and competently.

And obviously, in his perch on the ladder's top, the genius would be without the need of a union—and may be, so far as we know, even without the need of his dreams.

• • • •

SOME OF the unions, if we are properly informed, have sought automatic promotions for the general run of Federal employe. The unions have seen all the competent clerks stymied in ruts for 10 or 15 years, without a budge. Merit nor anything else has counted in the cases. So some have considered that automatic promotions (call it seniority if you wish) would serve the ends of the greatest number, though the climb came solely on "endurance."

We don't deny that such a system might strangle and thwart a couple of geniuses here and there. But isn't a genius eternally thwarted, anyway? If they weren't thwarted and frustrated souls they wouldn't be geniuses or the mediums through which great and good productiveness is wrought in this world.

CCC Quietly Saves 2 Million By Rehabilitating Equipment

Cots, Tools, Cars and Even Clothes Made Like New Since April, 1934; Enrollees Given Chance to Exercise Mechanical Bent.

In the face of a general administration spending program the War Department and the Civilian Conservation Corps have quietly put into operation, it was learned yesterday, an economy program through the establishment of rehabilitation bases where CCC machinery, equipment and even clothing are being salvaged. Cots, tools, shoes and raincoats, among many other items, are being repaired and made usable a second time.

"The experimental station" was started at Fort Hayes, Ohio, in 1934, the idea being credited here to Maj. Gen. William E. Cole, commanding the Fifth Corps Area. CCC commanders were ordered to send old clothing, socks, uniforms, work suits, mattresses and refrigerators to Fort Hayes. Soon they were issued the same articles, so new in appearance they could hardly believe the "new" stuff was old.

But more articles were demanded by the salvage center, and soon it had to be enlarged and moved to Columbus, the Army's general depot for the Fifth Corps. The savings increased to more than $1,000,000 a year, calculated on the difference between the cost of reclaiming and the cost of a new article.

Comparatively new iceboxes, mess kits and other articles began to appear in the camps, and it was discovered that they had been made from material the Army had found unusable.

A second center was allocated to Schenectady and a third proposed at New Cumberland, Pa.

The idea spread to automobiles, and about 75 repair stations have been placed in operation throughout the country. CCC enrollees who hava demonstrated a mechanical bent are being given a chance to work in the stations. It is also tentatively planned to establish three or more "major" automobile overhaul stations.

From April, 1934, when the experiment was started, through June 30, 1937, according to figures supplied by the War Department, the value of "replacement" cost of items repaired and renovated at the Ohio center amounted to $2,657,892.68.

The net savings were placed at $2,134,255.24, which does not include what was saved in the repair and overhaul of old automobiles, tractors and road building machinery.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 7.—President Roosevelt today sought to give the Nation an emergency power system for use in the event of war, appointing a six-man committee to "find and recommend to me definite ways and means" of meeting a possible electricity shortage.

In letters to members of the group, the President said reports from the War Department and the Federal Power Commission "have disclosed a shortage of power to meet the needs of the Nation's industry in the event of war such as to constitute a serious threat to the national security."

The reports, he said, had given him "much concern."

Delano of the National Resources Committee; Basil Manly of the Federal Power Commission; Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, and a member of the National Power Policy Committee; Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities Commission.

The President spent a restful day at his Hyde Park estate. He conferred last night with Harry Hopkins, the WPA Administrator, discussing the progress of the Administration's spending-lending program. Hopkins, leaving for Washington today, told reporters there was "no news" in his visit to the summer White House.

Cruises to Hyde Park.

The President's yacht, Potomac, cruised up the Hudson to the vicinity of Hyde Park today from Crisfield, Md. White House authorities said it would anchor in the Hudson, and the Chief Executive might use it for a brief cruise on the river.

HM! YOUR SLIP IS SHOWIN'

Bob Burns Says—

I suppose the reason they have a judge of domestic relations is because domestic quarrels are a whole lot like a checker game. The onlooker can always see moves and mistakes quicker than the contestants.

Uncle Hod met grandpa one mornin' and says, "I can't understand why my wife walked out on me." He said, "We had a little argument, of course, and she threw a flat iron at me and then I threw a vase at her and then she threw the coffee pot at me and I threw a cup and a saucer at her."

Grandpa says, "Well, that's what made her mad—you shouldn't have thrown the saucer. When you threw the cup, it was her turn, then."

District Council On Safety Like Chest Is Urged

Permanent Community Unit Suggested to Traffic Group.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Proposals to establish in Washington a permanent community safety council—supported by public subscription—were laid before the Commissioners' traffic advisory committee yesterday by W. T. Blanchard, of the National Safety Council.

Conferring with the committee's executive group, Blanchard described Washington as "one of the worst cities in which to arouse public support" and urged formation of an independent safety council to stimulate interest in efforts to solve the complex traffic question.

Such a group—similar to ones operating in various cities throughout the country—could be organized along lines of the annual Community Chest drive, Blanchard suggested. He estimated budget requirements at $15,000.

Proposals Tabled.

In urban centers where community safety organizations have been established, he said, accidents, injuries and deaths have shown marked drops. He pledged support of the National Safety Council in "starting things off in Washington."

Blanchard's proposals, presented as the advisory executive committee met to discuss final "long-range" plans for Washington traffic, were temporarily tabled pending a meeting of the full committee tomorrow.

Meanwhile, further intensifying its campaign for safe and courteous driving, the Postoffice Department yesterday issued special safety instructions to 18,000 mail truck drivers in the District and 48 States.

Pamphlets, Letters Sent.

A letter to each of the drivers from Smith W. Purdum, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General in charge of motor vehicle service, stressed the necessity for caution on the highway and called upon carriers to support community accident-prevention efforts.

A safety pamphlet, containing basic rules of the road, was sent with each letter. Said Purdum:

"Safety is a vital factor in our everyday life, and the operators of mail trucks are particularly in the public eye. Thoughtfulness and courtesy on your part will reflect creditably to you and this service."

Employes of the city postoffice have already pledged themselves to safe driving habits by enrolling in The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce accident prevention movement.

Institute Is Supported.

First response in The Post-Junior Board program to enroll motorists for a ten-week safety institute course came yesterday from Burke Edwards, of Chevy Chase, local distributor of Berkeley Club beverage products.

Edwards agreed to have his concern represented at safety institute sessions and said he would distribute The Post-Junior Board safety emblems with every case of his product.

"We are in full accord with the movement," he said, "and I will be glad to spread the safety word along by using the emblems to remind my customers of the growing need for driving sanity."

The Post again publishes today an enrollment blank for the safety institute. Unique programs have been arranged and enrollments will be accepted in the order they are received.

Await Police Data.

Although reserving a decision to include in its recommendations a plea for an increased police personnel, the advisory executive committee yesterday pointed out that although during the past eight years vehicle registrations have increased 28 per cent and the population 29 per cent, only a 2 per cent boost in policemen has been granted.

It was decided, however, to withhold recommendations for more policemen until specific instances of the need have been furnished by the Police Department.

In its final "long-range" planning program, to be submitted to the Commissioners following tomorrow's meeting, the committee will urge greater penalties for accident-causing traffic infractions; a system of pedestrian control and an intensive educational program.

Two Women Injured.

The final plans were drafted by Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, chairman of the group; L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations; George Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club; Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the AAA, and Maj. Sidney Morgan, secretary of the committee.

The full committee will meet at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow in the National Guard Armory.

Accidents in Washington were again held at a minimum yesterday with only two women receiving hospital treatment for injuries.

Harriet Austin, 70, of 1543 Forty-fourth street northwest, received cuts and bruises when struck at Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Anna Nauck, 65, of 701 Decatur street northwest, was injured at Eighth and D streets northwest. They were treated at Emergency Hospital.

Lehman 3d Term Seen to Beat Dewey

By the United Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Possibility President Roosevelt would urge Gov. Herbert H. Lehman to run for Governor of New York again in order to suppress the political ascendancy of District Attorney Thomas Dewey was speculated upon tonight.

The President discussed politics with Irwin Steingut, Democratic State Assembly leader.

Although Steingut insisted his visit had to do with the celebration of the first constitutional convention in Poughkeepsie, at which Mr. Roosevelt will be the speaker, September 17, close friends of the Administration professed to read deep political implications into it.

Democratic leaders believe, Republicans will nominate Hines Trial Prosecutor Dewey for President. They feel, moreover, that only Lehman can defeat him, but that it will require considerable persuasion for the Governor to seek a third term, rather than stand for the Senate this fall.

Idle Funds Bar Recovery, Says Reserve Board

Federal Reserve Points to Stagnant Funds in U. S. Banks.

Idle money is still one of the Nation's greatest obstacles to swift recovery, study of the latest Federal Reserve Bulletin, released last night, revealed.

Bank deposits now total the almost unprecedented sum of $47,500,000,000, but turnover—the ratio of checks cashed to the average amount deposited—is the lowest in American financial history.

The Reserve report stressed the stagnant pools of idle money in its review of the month's business and credit situation, but pointed to a few encouraging signs of credit expansion: a slight increase in commercial loans since July, after a steady drop since last October, and a gradual climb in real estate loans.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper yesterday reported that "the steady processes of recovery, effective since mid-June, are continuing," in a more optimistic view.

The recovery program drove ahead with announcements of Presidential approval of loan contracts totaling $48,279,000 for 30 additional slum clearance projects in 18 cities under the United States Housing Authority.

The Public Works Administration further approved 317 non-Federal projects to cost an estimated $45,475,991, of which PWA contributed $20,446,937 in grants and $2,109,863 in loans. This list brought the total of Federal and non-Federal approved projects to 5,769, costing $1,358,380,327, toward which PWA has contributed $715,388,128 in grants and $43,013,633 in loans.

The Federal Housing Administration announced yesterday that the volume of home financing business transacted in August reached a new monthly peak of $14,226,887, or 11 per cent over July, and 115 per cent above August of last year. The highest previous month was June of this year.

Mortgages accepted for insurance (commitments) totaled $67,877,900 in August, 12 per cent above last monthly peak of $14,226,887, or 11 1937. About 70 per cent of the accepted mortgages were on new homes.

Property improvement loans also reached a new high of 42,230 for August, with a value of $20,471,304; as compared with $16,637,638 in July. This brought the total of these loans under the amended housing act to $88,402,499.

Evidence '2d Hand' Earle Inquiry Told

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 7.—District Attorney Carl B. Shelley, summoned before a legislative investigating committee a few hours after the Supreme Court permitted it to proceed with an inquiry into charges against Gov. Earle and associates, testified tonight all the material he gathered for a projected grand jury investigation was based on "hearsay."

Insurance Firms Sent Quiz by SEC

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday formally launched its investigation into the $24,000,000,000 life insurance industry with a long questionnaire on organization and management of 406 legal reserve companies.

The commission will submit a second questionnaire to insurance concerns inquiring into life insurance management aspects. A third questionnaire, dealing with financial aspects of insurance operation, will be sent out later.

The SEC has already indicated that it will study the private placement of securities by issuers with large insurance companies. The commission is interested in studying the preferred position which life companies assume as wholesale buyers of stocks and bonds over other investors, it is stated.

The life insurance companies are asked to submit their data to the commission by October 1.

Workers Alliance Drops Fund Plan

The Workers' Alliance yesterday dropped plans to raise a $50,000 campaign fund, but announced it would accept voluntary contributions and "mobilize the political power of the unemployed and WPA workers to put progressives into political office."

Responding sharply to a "warning" from Chairman Sheppard, of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, David Lasser, president of the organized WPA workers, challenged Sheppard's interpretation of the law.

He called the chairman's threat of prosecution "shameful" and "in conspicuously bad taste," and said Sheppard had allowed his "own personal opinions as to the desirability of a works program to color your judgment as to our rights."
